

Fight Club Report.

There are 3 relative audience theories that I am going to apply to my questionnaire results on Fight Club.

The first Theory is the Gratification Theory also known as The Blumler and Katz theory. This theory is that the audience uses the media to help them fulfil their basic needs. This is usually to make them happy, for education reasons or for social reasons. This is a way of diverting or escaping, known as diversion. Diversion is a way of escaping reality for the audience. For example, people who watch shows such as The Walking Dead have an hour a week where they can just relax and escape from the rest of the world into this different universe inside the show. The theory is also that it's a way of personal relationships, and identity. This helps especially in social situation where a group of friends can interact and talk about the media.

Another theory is the Hypodermic Needle Theory. This is a theory that the media is changing the way the audience thinks. It does this by "injecting" thoughts and feelings into the audience's head. Media can send powerful images and influence a mass amount of people and make them act a certain way. For example, in the American election, Hillary Clinton uses Celebrities and news to tell people to vote her. This makes people automatically think this is the right decision to make.

The third and final theory is the Reception Theory. This is a theory that the media is encoded by the creators and then decoded by the audience. Audiences have three different readings of a media depending on their back grounds. These readings are, Preferred, Negotiated or Oppositional. This all has a lot to do with age and Gender.

The film Fight club is film directed by David Finger and released in 1999 Starring Brad Pitt and Edward Norton. The film got a certificate of 18 after being banned at first for having too much violence. The film is about a salesman finding a new form of therapy. This ends up starting an underground "Fight Club" this then escalated and spiralled out of control.

BBFC (British Board of Film Classification) had opened up a case study on the film. They were the first people to view the film as critics will view the film and give their reviews. BBFC didn't ban the film straight away. They made a good point and changed their guidelines.

"The new BBFC Guidelines established the principle that adults should be free to chose their own entertainment, within the law, and it was considered that there was nothing in Fight Club that was in breach of UK law, or felt to be harmful." This basically is saying people should be free to watch a violent film if they wanted too. People who don't like it don't have to watch it. This is big reason to why it got the 18 rated certificate and didn't get banned.

Another famous review of the film is by Alexander Walker where he slated the film. He mentions how he doesn't like certain aspects of the film. He says he thinks it's a way of propaganda and goes on about political points and compares it to Hitler and sending the Jews to their deaths. I think this is more Oppositional reading of the film, and definitely applies to the Reception Theory. Alexander decoded this film in a bad way, and as he never once said anything good about this film. I can tell this all applies to the reception theory because it's a more personal reading, it's all based on how he groups up and his own

Studying Fight Club Mark Ramey, 2012-08-14 Fight Club is on one level pop culture phenomena and on another a deeply philosophical and satirical exploration of modern life David Fincher's 1999 film and Chuck Palahniuk's source novel has had a huge impact on audiences worldwide leading to spoofs homage merchandising and numerous Internet fan sites On initial release the film was met with wide hostility from critics who either failed to appreciate its satirical intent or believed the film failed to deliver on its satirical promise Early in its DVD afterlife however a wider audience began to appreciate the film's significance and radical message Although attracted by the film's playfulness and star wattage however many students struggle with its theoretical notions such as Capitalism materialism anarchy and so on This is one film which therefore merits a thoughtful and provocative analysis but also an accessible one and Mark Ramey has provided just that Chuck

Trumpism, Bigotry, and the Threat to American Democracy Larry N. Gerston,2023-12-11 In Trumpism Bigotry and the Threat to American Democracy Larry N Gerston examines the near lethal combination of American bigotry and the ability of Donald Trump to take advantage of this scourge to satisfy his own political objective. The result is an individual who won election to the American presidency by adroitly pitting members of American society against one another while presenting himself as the only person in the position to save America from itself. Having succeeded to the nation's most important political office, Trump proceeded to use the position for his own benefit irrespective of laws, norms, and most importantly, the Constitution. So powerful was Trump that he and his minions came close to overturning the 2020 presidential election with the January 6, 2021 insurrection against the nation's Capitol. While Trump failed in his attempt to remain in office, the threat to the well-being of the United States remains real.
