Background

Every BC company, which includes an Unlimited Liability Company, must file an annual report within two months of its anniversary date of incorporation. The annual report filing reminds the company to promptly file any change to the information shown in the Corporate Register. It also tells the Corporate Registry that the company is still active.

If a company does not file its annual report within two months of its anniversary date it will not be in good standing.

The registrar may dissolve a company if the company fails to file in each of two consecutive years an Annual Report required by the Business Corporations Act.

A company's annual reports must be filed in consecutive order.

If the company has outstanding annual reports that were due before January 26, 2002, those annual reports must be submitted to the Corporate Registry on paper. Only annual reports due after January 26, 2002, can be filed electronically.

Visit the downloads page to download Form 6 - BC Annual Report for submission to the registry.

Capital and Labour in the British Columbia Forest Industry, 1934-74 Gordon Hak,2011-11-01 The history of British Columbia's economy in the twentieth century is inextricably bound to the development of the forest industry. In this comprehensive study Gordon Hak approaches the forest industry from the perspectives of workers and employers examining the two main sets of institutions that structured the relationship during the Fordist era: the companies and the unions. Drawing on theories of the labour process, Fordism, and discursive subjectivity, Hak relates daily routines of production and profit making to broader forces of unionism, business ideology, ecological protest, technological change, and corporate concentration. The struggle of the small business sector to survive in the face of corporate growth, the history of the industry on the Coast and in the Interior, the transformations in capital-labour relations during the period, government forest policy, and the forest industry's encounter with the emerging environmental movement are all considered in this eloquent analysis. With its critical historical perspective, Capital and Labour in the British Columbia Forest Industry will be essential reading for anyone interested in the business, natural resource, political, social, and labour history of the province.

Selling British Columbia Michael Dawson,2007-10-01 Selling British Columbia is an entertaining examination of the development of the tourist industry in British Columbia between 1890 and 1970. Michael Dawson argues that in order to understand the roots of the fully fledged consumer culture that emerged in Canada after the Second World War, it is necessary to understand the connections between the 1930s, 1940s, and the postwar era. Cultural producers such as tourism promoters and the state infrastructure played important roles in fostering consumer demand, particularly during the Depression, the Second World War, and throughout the postwar era. Dawson draws upon promotional pamphlets, newspapers, advertisements, and films, as well as archival sources regarding government, civic, and international tourism organizations. Central to his book is an examination of the representation of popular imagery and of how aboriginal and British cultures were commodified and marketed to potential tourists. He also looks at the gendered aspect of these promotional campaigns, particularly during the 1940s, and challenges earlier interpretations regarding the relationship between tourism and nature in Canada. Historians have tended to focus on either the first wave of consumerism from the 1880s to the 1920s, or else on the era of economic expansion that followed World War Two. As Dawson shows, the 1930-45 period, in particular, was an important and dynamic one in the creation of Canadian and British Columbian consumer culture. Michael Dawson's highly readable and engaging account of the development of the British Columbia tourist industry will be welcomed by British Columbian and Canadian historians as well as other scholars of tourism and consumerism Report of the Department of Agriculture of the Province of British Columbia British Columbia. Department of Agriculture,1915 Sessional Papers British Columbia. Parliament,1915 Working Mothers and the Child Care Dilemma Lisa Pasolli,2015-05-15 During the twentieth century child care policy in British Columbia matured in the shadow of a political uneasiness with working motherhood Working Mothers and the Child Care Dilemma examines how ideas about motherhood paid work and social welfare influenced universal child care discussions and consistently pushed access to child care to the margins of BC's social policy agenda Charting the growth of the child care movement in this province Lisa Pasolli examines the arrival of Vancouver's first crèche in 1912 the teetering steps forward during the debates of the interwar years the development of provincial child care policy the rebellious advancements of second wave feminists in the 1960s and 1970s and the maturation of provincial and national child care politics since the mid 70s In addition to revealing much about historical attitudes toward women's roles Working Mothers and the Child Care Dilemma celebrates the efforts of mothers and advocates who for decades have lobbied for child care as a central part of women's rights as workers parents and citizens Into the House of Old Megan J. Davies,2004-10 Davies study of institutional life is multi textured informed by social and architectural theory while telling us much about daily life in these facilities We learn about angry rebellion and harsh discipline fun and festivals death and compassion And we see how the twentieth century witnessed the gradual withdrawal of these institutions from the life of the community further enhancing the marginal place of the old age home in our society Chronicling the evolution of professional ideas about residential care facilities and an innovative program to move elderly patients out of acute care hospital beds Into the House of Old provides a context for understanding this problematic institution as both an offspring of the poor law and a product of the post Second World War expansion of state medical services Iowa Administrative Bulletin ,1980

Workers, Capital, and the State in British Columbia Rennie Warburton,David Coburn,2011-11-01 This collection of essays offers a comprehensive examination of the working class experience in British Columbia and contains essential background knowledge for an understanding of contemporary relations between government labour and employees It treats workers relationship to the province's resource base the economic role of the state the structure of capitalism the labour market and the influence of ethnicity and race on class relations Using different analytical categories and based on primary research the individual studies provide new assessments of the development of capitalist relations of production the way new economic developments changed old and traditional cultures the connection between the demand for labour and the immigration policy the impact of technology on work relations and the various responses of labour to the policies of the state and capital groupings Articles focusing on episodes from the 1870s to the present deal with major staple industries such as the early fur trade fishing mining and forestry and with the struggle of labourers against their employers in communities such as New Westminster and Fraser Mills and in specific sectors such as telecommunications and education. Many of the analyses show that ethnicity acts both as a focus of integration and resistance against external forces in the larger society and as a point of division and antagonism internal to the working class. The activities of the working class and its relationships to other parts of society are of primary importance in explaining social and economic change in the province and in the country. Workers Capital and the State in British Columbia will be of interest to students of class labour and community relations.

A Knock on the Door Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada, 2015-12-15. It can start with a knock on the door one morning. It is the local Indian agent or the parish priest or perhaps a Mounted Police officer. So began the school experience of many Indigenous children in Canada for more than a hundred years and so begins the history of residential schools prepared by the Truth Reconciliation Commission of Canada. Between 2008 and 2015 the TRC provided opportunities for individuals, families and communities to share their experiences of residential schools and released several reports based on 7000 survivor statements and five million documents from government, churches and schools as well as a solid grounding in secondary sources. A Knock on the Door published in collaboration with the National Research Centre for Truth Reconciliation gathers material from the several reports the TRC has produced to present the essential history and legacy of residential schools in a concise and accessible package that includes new materials to help inform and contextualize the journey to reconciliation that Canadians are now embarked upon. Survivor and former National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations Phil Fontaine provides a Foreword and an Afterword. The National Research Centre for Truth Reconciliation home to the archive of recordings and documents collected by the TRC. As Aimé Craft writes in the Afterword, knowing the historical backdrop of residential schooling and its legacy is essential to the work of reconciliation. In the past, agents of the Canadian state knocked on the doors of Indigenous families to take the children to school. Now the Survivors have shared their truths and knocked back. It is time for Canadians to open the door to mutual understanding, respect and reconciliation.

Secwépemc People, Land, and Laws Marianne Ignace, Ronald E. Ignace, 2017-10-31. Secwépemc People, Land, and Laws is a journey through the 10,000-year history of the Interior Plateau nation in British Columbia. Told through the lens of past and present Indigenous storytellers, this volume details how a homeland has shaped Secwépemc existence while the Secwépemc have in turn shaped their homeland. Marianne Ignace and Ronald Ignace, with contributions from ethnobotanist Nancy Turner, archaeologist Mike Rousseau and geographer Ken Favrholt, compellingly weave together Secwépemc narratives about ancestors' deeds. They demonstrate how these stories are the manifestation of Indigenous laws, stories for social and moral conduct among humans and all sentient beings on the land and for social and political relations within the nation and with outsiders. Breathing new life into stories about past transformations, the authors place these narratives in dialogue with written historical sources and knowledge from archaeology, ethnography, linguistics, earth science and ethnobiology. In addition to a wealth of detail about Secwépemc land stewardship the social and political order and spiritual concepts and relations embedded in the Indigenous language the book shows how between the mid 1800s and 1920s the Secw pemc people resisted devastating oppression and the theft of their land and fought to retain political autonomy while tenaciously maintaining a connection with their homeland ancestors and laws An exemplary work in collaboration Secw pemc People Land and Laws points to the ways in which Indigenous laws and traditions can guide present and future social and political process among the Secw pemc and with settler society

World War The experiences of the First World War should have been a valuable legacy to those who devised the counter offensive strategy in the years between the war Unfortunately the lessons learnt were soon forgotten and many of the operational and technical problems which the planners had begun to tackle in 1918 were not even seen to exist by the Air Staff during the 1920s and early 1930s
