1. What is the title of the film you picked?

I chose the film, "Slavery and the Making of America."

2. Why did you pick this film over the others offered?

I chose this film documentary over the others because I have always wanted to learn more about slavery and how it shaped and effected America. Often we are just told what we read in books or stories that have been passed down about what really went on in this country. Slavery is a big subject and one of if not the biggest tragedies in the history of this country. I wanted to watch this documentary to uncover more truth and facts about the shape of this country during that time. I also liked the descriptions that are specified about the video and what it talks about and will cover. It states that the four part documentary will cover the beginning of slavery from the British colonies which then migrates down south to the north and how it ends. I have always been intrigued by the history of slavery and how it came about and how it was for Africans and African Americans during that time.

3. What is/are the central message(s) of this documentary/fictional film? Be specific. Use examples from the film to support your choice.

There are many central messages regarding this documentary. The main messages conveyed in this documentary were resistance amongst the slaves, struggle to maintain dignity, their life styles and culture, their status as workers, knowing their value as a slave, the change of racism, slaves were underestimated about their knowledge and understanding, family was essential and helped them survive and powerful political figures along with American beliefs were major hypocrites. Their statuses were confusing and complex however, they were both treated equal and would often retreat to taverns to bond and talk about their masters.

The Atlantic Creole's made the system work for them. They knew how to bargain with their masters to get what they needed and still maintain a fair working lifestyle. The turn of...
