Horseless Age, 1916 Ford Dealer and Service Field, 1929 Transport and accessibility to public services Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Environmental Audit Committee, 2013-06-24 This report looks at progress on improving accessibility since 2003 and ways of improving accessibility Problems with transport provision and the location of services can reinforce social exclusion by preventing people from accessing key local services and undermines government policies to tackle worklessness increase participation in education reduce crime and narrow health inequalities Insufficient progress has been made since the 2003 Social Exclusion Unit's Making the Connections report many findings of which are relevant today There is evidence that accessibility is worsening driven by tight budgets in central and local government Accessibility statistics show travel times to key services steadily increasing over time particularly for access to hospitals The Department for Transport needs to focus more closely on improving accessibility as well as on supporting the economy Existing transport funding could be better coordinated and directed to accessibility focused initiatives which will have a swifter impact on people's well being than large infrastructure projects The social value of transport and accessibility needs to be explicitly considered in policy making and in the planning system and should no longer be seen as a second order criterion The Committee believes it will take time for any improvements to make a noticeable difference Their recommendations focus on improving how government operates rather than funding Central government cannot abdicate its role in coordinating action across departmental silos and helping local authorities and service providers to share best practice Accessibility planning introduced by Making the Connections has had limited success and needs to be re-energised

Cutler,Ernst R. Berndt,2007-12-01 With the United States and other developed nations spending as much as 14 percent of their GDP on medical care economists and policy analysts are asking what these countries are getting in return Yet it remains frustrating and difficult to measure the productivity of the medical care service industries This volume takes aim at that problem while taking stock of where we are in our attempts to solve it Much of this analysis focuses on the capacity to measure the value of technological change and other health care innovations A key finding suggests that growth in health care spending has coincided with an increase in products and services that together reduce mortality rates and promote additional health gains Concerns over the apparent increase in unit prices of medical care may thus understate positive impacts on consumer welfare When appropriately adjusted for such quality improvements health care prices may actually have fallen Provocative and compelling this volume not only clarifies one of the more nebulous issues in health care analysis but in so doing addresses an area of pressing public
