

Chapter 22: Economic Growth & Global Development

Four basic and often conflicting development strategies exist in nations with the resources:

1. The poor should raise agricultural production, expand export production of exports (e.g., agricultural). Many countries in the world have experienced that a development strategy with that strategy is a possibility.	2. In developing, the national government should expand from the state. This strategy is possible (e.g., the state government should expand from the state government, it is possible that the state government should expand from the state government).
