The Influence of Affluence

"For as wealth is power, so all power will infallibly draw wealth to itself by some means or other."

Edward Burke (1780)

"Of great riches there is no real use, except it be in the distribution."

Francis Bacon (De Dignitate et Augmentis Scientiarum, 1623)

John Bates Clark

"Riches: The saving of many in the hands of one."

August V. Doh

Those persons who comprise the independent classes are dependent upon two things: the industry of their fellow creatures; and injustice, which enables them to command it.

Based on John Gray (A Lecture on Human Happiness, 1825)

"No rich man is ugly."

INTRODUCTION

The other day, I was interviewed by CNBC. One of the participants on their panel asked me whether I believed I was providing a service to investors by warning them that stocks could decline by between 20% and 40%, or even more. He further questioned my morality in dissuading investors from buying stocks that were being touted as a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to make money following these March 2009 lows. Aside from the inaccuracy of the interviewer's statement that I had been keeping investors out of the market, I was taken aback by the notion of a CNBC employee talking about morality. Every year, I attend several conferences and so I'm used to being asked all kinds of questions by the audience. I also get my fair share of hate mail — not from my subscribers, but from small, frustrated investors who failed to make any money because they bought the wrong stocks at the wrong time. But to have CNBC talking about morality was like having Bernie Madoff give a speech about corporate governance.
