

A People's History of the United States Howard Zinn

Chapter 1: "Columbus, the Indians, and Human Progress"

1. According to Zinn, what was Columbus's motivation for his discovery of the United States?

Zinn's motivation was to depict history from the viewpoint of the oppressed people rather than the viewpoint of politicians or historians.

2. According to Zinn, what is Columbus's greatest contribution to history?

Columbus's greatest contribution was to bring to the attention of the world the existence of the Americas, which had been inhabited by millions of people for thousands of years.

3. What is Zinn's main criticism of Columbus's voyage to the Americas?

Zinn criticizes Columbus's voyage as a quest for wealth and power, and for the exploitation of the native people. He argues that Columbus's actions were driven by greed and a desire for glory, rather than by a sense of discovery or exploration.

4. What impact did Columbus's voyage have on the Americas?

Zinn argues that Columbus's voyage led to the destruction of native cultures and the introduction of European diseases, which decimated the native population. He also argues that the voyage led to the exploitation of the native people for labor and resources.

5. Internally, how much evidence do you have that shows Columbus to represent indigenous peoples?

Zinn argues that there is very little evidence to suggest that Columbus represented indigenous peoples. He argues that Columbus's actions were driven by greed and a desire for glory, and that he was responsible for the destruction of native cultures and the exploitation of the native people.
