Mathematical induction is a technique for proving that a statement is true for all natural numbers. It consists of two steps: the base case and the inductive step. The base case is the statement being proved for the smallest natural number, usually 1. The inductive step is the statement being proved for a general natural number n , assuming it is true for $n-1$. If both steps are proved, then the statement is true for all natural numbers.

- 1. Identify what the programmer is attempting to do: calculate the sum of the numbers from 1 to 100.
- 2. Plan the problem and the computer can then solve it:
 - a. calculate a small number (such as 10) to get a larger number. If the computer is not a different number than the problem, the solution will be too small.
 - b. calculate the number of numbers from 1 to 100. If the number is too small, the computer will not be able to solve the problem. If the number is too large, the computer will not be able to solve the problem.
 - c. calculate the number of numbers from 1 to 100. If the number is too small, the computer will not be able to solve the problem. If the number is too large, the computer will not be able to solve the problem.
- 3. Write the code for the computer to solve the problem.
- 4. Test the code to see if it works.
- 5. Debug the code if it does not work.
- 6. Repeat the process if the code does not work.
