International Handbook of Thinking and Reasoning Linden J. Ball,Valerie A. Thompson,2017-11-14 The Routledge

International Handbook of Thinking and Reasoning is an authoritative reference work providing a balanced overview of current scholarship spanning the full breadth of the rapidly developing and expanding field of thinking and reasoning. It contains 35 chapters written by leading international researchers covering foundational issues as well as state of the art developments in thinking and reasoning research. Topics covered range across all sub areas of thinking and reasoning including deduction induction abduction judgment decision making argumentation problem solving expertise creativity and rationality. The contributors engage with cutting edge debates such as the status of dual process theories of thinking the role of unconscious intuitive emotional and metacognitive processes in thinking and the importance of probabilistic conceptualisations of thinking and reasoning. Authors also examine the importance of neuroscientific findings in informing theoretical developments and explore the situated nature of thinking and reasoning across a range of real world contexts such as mathematics medicine and science. The Handbook provides a clear sense of the way in which contemporary ideas are challenging traditional viewpoints as new paradigm of the psychology of reasoning emerges. This paradigm shifting research is paving the way toward a richer and more inclusive understanding of thinking and reasoning where important new questions drive a forward looking research agenda. It is essential reading for both established researchers in the field of thinking and reasoning as well as advanced students wishing to learn more about both the historical foundations and latest developments in this rapidly growing field.

Improving Working Memory in Learning and Intellectual Disabilities

Silvia Lanfranchi, Barbara Carretti, 2016-08-05. The last forty years of research have demonstrated that working memory WM is a key concept for understanding higher order cognition. To give an example WM is involved in reading comprehension problem solving and reasoning but also in a number of everyday life activities. It has a clear role in the case of atypical development too. For instance numerous studies have shown an impairment in WM in individuals with learning disabilities LD or intellectual disabilities ID and several researchers have hypothesized that this can be linked to their difficulties in learning cognition and everyday life. The latest challenge in the field concerns the trainability of WM. If it is a construct central to our understanding of cognition in typical and atypical development then specific intervention to sustain WM performance might also promote changes in cognitive processes associated with WM. The idea that WM can be modified is debated however partly because of the theoretical implications of this view and partly due to the generally contradictory results obtained so far. In fact most studies converge in demonstrating specific effects of WM training i.e. improvements in the trained tasks but few transfer effects to allied cognitive processes are generally reported. It is worth noting that any maintenance effects when investigated are even more meagre. In addition a number of methodological concerns have been raised in relation to the use of 1 single tasks to assess the effects of a training program 2 WM tasks differing from those used in the training to assess the effects of WM training and 3 passive control groups. These and other crucial issues have so far prevented any conclusions from being drawn on the efficacy of WM training. Bearing in mind that the opportunity to train WM could have a huge impact in the educational and clinical settings it seems fundamentally important to shed more light on the limits and potential of this line of research The aim of the research discussed here is to generate new evidence on the feasibility of training WM in individuals with LD and ID There are several questions that could be raised in this field For a start can WM be trained in this population Are there some aspects of WM that can be trained more easily than others Can a WM training reduce the impact of LD and ID on learning outcomes and on everyday living What kind of training program is best suited to the promotion of such changes
