

MENTAL HEALTH NURSING PROCESS RECORDING GUIDE

The interaction between the nurse and the patient, as you recall, is recorded and examined in the process recording—that is, a record of the on-going interaction, the process of two people relating with each other. The recording includes a description of the patient's nonverbal and verbal behaviors, the nurse's response, identification of the therapeutic technique used by the nurse, and an explanation of the nurse's evaluation and interpretation of the interaction.

The major elements of the process recording are reviewed here:

Patient's Nonverbal Behavior:

First, notice the patient's nonverbal behavior, because it often speaks so much more loudly than the patient's actual words. Look at the patient's appearance—is clothing appropriate to the weather, the activity, the place? Are jewelry and make-up likewise appropriate? Is the patient neat, clean, free of odors, etc?

Next, look at the patient's body language—is he smiling, laughing, crying, maintaining a tense facial expression? Is his posture erect, stooped, slouched? Does he walk rapidly, shuffling, not move at all? Are his body movements slow, fast, jerky? What are his motor activities (kicking his foot against a chair, falling asleep during a conversation, etc.)? Is the patient able to establish eye contact with you? Does talking about certain topics cause the eye contact to increase or decrease? Are there signs of anxiety (moist palms, restlessness)?

Based on these observations, you may assess the patient's affect (or feeling tone—a reflection of mood). Is he happy, sad, lonely, apathetic, cheerful, angry, etc.? Is his feeling tone appropriate to the situation and recent events?

You may make many more observations of nonverbal behavior and include them in your process recording. The behaviors mentioned here are only to serve as a guide, a brief outline to help you gather ideas together.

Patient's Verbal Behavior:

Now, consider the patient's actual conversation with you. While you are talking with the patient, think about the following points and include them in your assessment:

1. Notice the patient's tone of voice—is it soft, harsh, commanding, frightened?

Textbook of Mental Health Nursing, Vol- I - E-Book Dorothy Deena Theodore, 2014-07-15. Textbook of Mental Health Nursing Vol I E Book. Elements of the Helping Process Raymond Fox, 2013-08-21. Elements of the Helping Process A Guide for Clinicians takes a humanistic approach to guiding clinicians emphasizing that professional practice involves a deliberate conscious and disciplined use of self with clients participating in a forum that is steady, safe and consistent. As with the previous editions it is directed personally to clinicians and students and contains illustrative case material and instructive excerpts from actual practice experience. Fox advances five overarching themes: the advent and influence of neuroscience, genetics and epigenetics and their implications for differential interventions, the pivotal place of self awareness, introspection and reflection in providing treatment, the intersection of science and art, evidence based practice and experiential wisdom in advancing effective therapy, the infusion and provision of hope especially in calamitous situations, personality type. Selected chapters from the second edition have been updated and expanded and new chapters on such topics as neuroscience and genetics, the contribution of personality types and advances in trauma research and treatment have been added. Any mental health clinician looking for guidance on establishing an environment of sharing, openness, challenge and change with his or her clients will find this book to be an invaluable resource.

Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing Desmond Cormack, William Reynolds, 2013-11-11. Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing. Theory and practice was conceived as a result of three major premises which in the view of the editors relate to the practice of psychiatric and mental health nursing. First that high quality psychiatric and mental health nursing can be practised only if it is underpinned by appropriate nursing theory. Secondly that there exists a body of theory which can and should be applied to psychiatric and mental health nursing. Thirdly that there is a need for a text which will assist teachers, students and clinicians to apply available nursing and borrowed theory to clinical practice. The general aim of this book is to introduce nursing students to a theory based approach to caring for people with psychiatric and mental health problems. The phrase psychiatric and mental health problems indicates that the text relates to clients with a psychiatric diagnosis and also to those who have mental health problems but who do not necessarily have such a diagnosis The client group to which the material in this text applies will include those who are or have been hospitalized and those in the community who have not been and may never be hospitalized The intended readership is all students of psychiatric and mental health nursing issues for example basic and post basic nurses and their teachers
