Environmental law in Malaysia Maizatun Mustafa, 2022-07-20 Derived from the renowned multi volume International Encyclopaedia of Laws this book provides ready access to legislation and practice concerning the environment in Malaysia. A general introduction covers geographic considerations, political, social and cultural aspects of environmental study, the sources and principles of environmental law, environmental legislation and the role of public authorities. The main body of the book deals first with laws aimed directly at protecting the environment from pollution in specific areas such as air, water, waste, soil, noise and radiation. Then a section on nature and conservation management covers protection of natural and cultural resources such as monuments, landscapes, parks and reserves, wildlife, agriculture, forests, fish, subsoil and minerals. Further treatment includes the application of zoning and land use planning rules on liability and administrative and judicial remedies to environmental issues. There is also an analysis of the impact of international and regional legislation and treaties on environmental regulation. Its succinct yet scholarly nature as well as the practical quality of the information it provides make this book a valuable resource for environmental lawyers handling cases affecting Malaysia. Academics and researchers as well as business investors and the various international organizations in the field will welcome this very useful guide and will appreciate its value in the study of comparative environmental law and policy.

Environmental Protection in Land Use & Development Control System in Malaysia Ainul Jaria Maidin, 2012 The importance of environmental protection and conservation has drawn much attention in Malaysia and internationally since global environmental problems first emerged as a common worldwide concern at the United Nations Conference on Human Environment since 1972. In 1992 Malaysia participated in the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development Earth Summit which upheld sustainable development as its central theme in environmental preservation and conservation The highlight of the Earth Summit was the adoption of the Rio Declaration which stipulates 27 basic principles to harmonise environment with development Agenda 21 a specific implementation plan was also established by the Earth Summit followed by the establishment of the Commission on Sustainable Development under the auspices of the United Nations Economic and Social Council to evaluate and monitor the implementation of the Rio Declaration and Agenda 21 The general belief that development and environmental protection are opposed to one another where priority is given to the economic development without due consideration to the environment may no longer be valid Malaysia is also moving on to encourage proper land use control measures and legislation in carrying out physical development towards an integrated approach in environmental planning and management thus ensuring sustainable development Simple as it sounds the concept is in fact a demanding one in the light of expanding population and diminishing non renewable resources such as minerals oil and gas In many developing countries like Malaysia there is a tendency to accord greater emphasis on employment generation and income improvement to the extent that environmental concerns are often ignored or suppressed as a result of socio economic pressures There is also increasing awareness that many of the present day pursuit of economic progress are occurring at the expense of the environment and hence are inherently non sustainable This has resulted in many cases where the environment has deteriorated to such an adverse level that the remedial repair costs are exorbitantly high There is an urgent need therefore to identify appropriate development strategies which will aim at achieving developmental goals through a combination of economic efficiency and environmental conservation This article seeks to examine the existing legal regulatory and institutional framework for land development and its role in facilitating the integration of environmental considerations so as to promote sustainable development in Malaysia

Challenges in Implementing and Enforcing Environmental Protection Measures in Malaysia Ainul Jaria Maidin,2012 This article discusses the challenges posed in implementing and enforcing environmental protection measures in Malaysia The discussion begins with general background information regarding the problems faced by the Malaysian government in overcoming environmental problems arising from poorly planned development activities Policies providing the basis for passing laws and regulations to promote environmental protection have been formulated to manage the post independence environmental problems However the post independence economic policies formulated by the government are often blamed as the principal reason for the present persisting environmental problems Introduction of various legal and non legal environmental protection measures have not been able to prevent further environmental degradation Despite commitments to the objective of preserving and enhancing environmental quality and passing of laws and regulations to achieve the means Malaysia is still faced with the problem of the competing demands of greater urban development and conserving the environment The commitment to integrate environment and economic policies at present is slightly hesitant owing to a misunderstood concept that preservation of environment means limited development It is often pointed out that the actual problem lies in implementing and enforcing the law The effectiveness of the legal mechanism adopted by the country is dampened by the constraints that exist within the legal and institutional framework This article will examine these factors as well as suggest measures to improve the implementation and enforcement of the environmental protection measures so as to achieve sustainable development

Nature and Nation Jeyamalar

Kathirithamby-Wells,2005-10-31 Nature and Nation explores the relations between people and forests in Peninsular Malaysia where the planet s richest terrestrial eco system met head on with the fastest pace of economic transformation experienced in the tropical world It engages the interplay of history culture science economics and politics to provide a holistic interpretation of the continuing relevance of forests to state and society in the moist tropics Malaysia has long been singled out for emulation by developing nations an accolade contradicted in recent years by concerns over its capital rather than poverty driven forest depletion The Malaysian case supports the call for re appraisal of entrenched prescriptions for development that go beyond material needs Book cover The Sustainability Shift Dr Adnan A Hezri, 2016-12-04 The Sustainability Shift Refashioning Malaysia's Future discusses the specific ecological threats facing Malaysia and the intellectual as well as practical shift required for a more sustainable future The book explores themes of environmental degradation climate change and imminent ecological collapse faced by humanity today These issues demand an urgent response from individuals industries and national governments Yet in most countries national policies are still based on fragmentary thinking and unsound science Malaysia a resource rich upper middle income economy is no exception It will certainly make a difference globally if Malaysia home to an important tropical rainforest with mega diverse species richness can make a transition to sustainability Malaysia faces a spectrum of institutional challenges as it grapples with this transition Instead of looking at environmental problems through a compartmentalised perspective it is essential to understand the common root causes of an overarching unsustainability This book shows how by reforming its institutional hardware software and heartware Malaysia can nurture an inclusive sustainable society and also benefit economically by greening its growth

Environmental Regulation in Malaysia and Singapore Greg Bankoff, Kylie Elston, 1994 The Challenge of Sustainable Forests Fadzillah M. Cooke, 1999 The Challenge of Sustainable Forests is an innovative piece of work that provides a range of insights into forest resource use in Malaysia and the power relations behind the working of forest policy at the local level It explores the rich debate on development and environment to cast new light on the social and ecological dimension of forest degradation Taking politics seriously the book draws on the micropolitics of scientific knowledge production in particular sustained yield technology to examine the institutionalization of scientific forestry in forest resource management With insights derived from fieldwork in Pahang and Sarawak the book argues that sustainable forest management as a movement and a scientific discipline is in danger of speaking a techno bureaucratic language similar to sustained yield unless fundamental questions about livelihood protection and access rights to environmental and forest resources are sufficiently addressed This process is not helped by the greater importance accorded biological and economic imperatives in conservation discourse and practice By way of exploring this issue The Challenge of Sustainable Forests takes a detour to the Philippines where issues of livelihood access rights and social justice have affected management practices more seriously than in Malaysia For sale in Asia Australia and New Zealand by NUS Press Singapore Environmental Protection Efforts in Malaysia Stephen Kuet Tze Yong, 1985 Taman Negara Mohd. Environmental Conservation and Management in Malaysia : Challenges for the 1990s, 1993 The Reid

Constitutional Commission Sarah Tan, 2016 Within the written words of the Malaysian Federal Constitution environment is missing No express term provides or protects the right to a clean environment except for a limited questionable right judicially interpreted under art 5 1 s right to life It has often been said that the framers of the Constitution the Reid Constitutional Commission omitted to provide for the environment given the Constitution s silence on this matter and that this omission is fatal However it is suggested contrarily that there may be historic evidence to demonstrate not only that the Reid Constitutional Commission made proposals for environmental protection but also that it envisaged a strong federal governmental role in the preservation and conservation of the environment a role which if recognised and adopted today could result in greater protection for the environment and a more certain legal environmental framework for Malaysia
