Christian Thue Djurslev, 2019-12-12 What has Alexander the Great to do with Jesus Christ Or the legendary king's conquest of the Persian Empire 335-23 BCE to do with the prophecies of the Old Testament In many ways the early Christian writings on Alexander and his legacy provide a lens through which it is possible to view the shaping of the literature and thought of the early church in the Greek East and the Latin West This book articulates that fascinating discourse for the first time by focusing on the early Christian use of Alexander Delving into an impressively deep pool of patristic literature written between 130-313 CE Christian Thue Djurslev offers original interpretations of various important authors from the learned lawyer Tertullian to the Christian Cicero Lactantius and from the apologist Tatian to the first church historian Eusebius He demonstrates that the early Christian adaptations of the Alexandrian myths created a new tradition that has continued to develop and expand ever since This innovative work of reception studies is important reading for all scholars of Alexander the Great and early church history Jewish Traditions in Early Christian Literature, Volume 1 Paul and the Jewish

Law Peter Tomson, 1990-01-01 While interest in Paul's relationship to Judaism has been growing recently this study adds an important aspect by comparing Paul's practical instruction with the ancient halakha or Jewish traditional law. First Corinthians is found to be a source of prime importance and surprisingly halakha appears to be basic to Paul's instruction for non-Jewish Christians. The book includes thorough discussion of hermeneutic and methodological implications always viewed in relation to the history of Pauline and Judaic study. Attention is also being paid to the setting within Hellenistic culture. Finally conclusions are drawn about the texture of Paul's thought and these are applied to two theological passages decisive for his place in Judaism. Historical and theological implications are vast both regarding Paul's relationship to Judaism, his attitude towards Jesus and his Apostles and the meaning of his teaching concerning justification and the Law.
