Screens Victoria Cain,2024-02-06 Why screens in schools from film screenings to instructional television to personal computers did not bring about the educational revolution promised by reformers Long before Chromebook giveaways and remote learning screen media technologies were enthusiastically promoted by American education reformers Again and again as schools deployed film screenings television programs and computer games screen based learning was touted as a cure for all educational ills But the transformation promised by advocates for screens in schools never happened In this book Victoria Cain chronicles important episodes in the history of educational technology as reformers technocrats public television producers and computer scientists tried to harness the power of screen based media to shape successive generations of students Cain describes how beginning in the 1930s champions of educational technology saw screens in schools as essential tools for training citizens and presented films to that end Among the films screened for educational purposes was the notoriously racist Birth of a Nation In the 1950s and 1960s both technocrats and leftist educators turned to screens to prepare young Americans for Cold War citizenship and from the 1970s through the 1990s as commercial television and personal computers arrived in classrooms screens in schools represented an increasingly privatized vision of schooling and civic engagement Cain argues that the story of screens in schools is not simply about efforts to develop the right technological tools rather it reflects ongoing tensions over citizenship racial politics private funding and distrust of teachers Ultimately she shows that the technologies that reformers had envisioned as improving education and training students in civic participation in fact deepened educational inequities

The Power of Neurodiversity Thomas Armstrong, 2025-07-29 From a bestselling author and psychologist an exploration and celebration of neurodivergence completely revised with the most up to date research and insights From ADHD and dyslexia to autism the number of diagnosis categories listed by the American Psychiatric Association has tripled in the last fifty years With so many people affected it is time to revisit our perceptions of people with disabilities Thomas Armstrong illuminates a new understanding of neuropsychological disorders He argues that if they are a part of the natural diversity of the human brain they cannot simply be defined as illnesses Armstrong explores the evolutionary advantages special skills and other positive dimensions of these conditions including autism ADHD dyslexia schizophrenia anxiety intellectual disabilities and mood disorders With an emphasis on positive niche construction for each area The Power of Neurodiversity is a manifesto as well as a keen look at disability as well as a must read for parents teachers and anyone who is looking to learn more about neurodivergence

When the Drama Club is Not Enough Jeff Perrotti, Kim Westheimer, 2002-08-16 When the Drama Club Is Not Enough presents the work of two young activists who have been at the forefront of the successful Safe Schools Program for Gay and Lesbian Students in Massachusetts a model for states and school districts nationwide They give concrete hard won and often inspiring lessons on integrating gay and lesbian issues to create powerful change for school communities The book discusses the previously undiscussable gay and lesbian identity and self esteem at the middle and elementary school level and gay and lesbian issues in school sports It tells the story of a high school junior who at the end of one of Jeff Perrotti s workshops on school sports raised his hand and said he was a football captain and wanted to come out and needed help and uses this dramatic narrative of personal courage to show step by step how gay and lesbian issues can be a catalyst for transformation of schools The authors speak directly to those who want to change school climate parents teachers administrators and students concerned about harassment and safety They offer seasoned and often humorous advice on dealing with controversy even if it occurs in the context of a school presentation on sexual orientation attended by angry and disruptive parents When the Drama Club Is Not Enough includes chapters on Getting Started and Race and Gender and sections on school policies and students legal rights in order to ensure safe schools      Scouting , Published by the Boy Scouts of America for all BSA registered adult volunteers and professionals Scouting magazine offers editorial content that is a mixture of information instruction and inspiration designed to strengthen readers abilities to better perform their leadership roles in Scouting and also to assist them as parents in strengthening families      Report on the Activities in the ...
