- 15th Amendment: gives all MEN the right to vote (former slaves)
- Jim Crow Laws: laws put into place by whites to keep African Americans and whites separated. They would often say "separate but equal." Things back then were not equal or fair.

- Freedmen's Bureau: government group who helped with the transition from being a slave to being a citizen. They helped former slaves find family members, education, and gain land.
- Sharecropping: Now that African Americans were no longer slaves, what could they do? Former slaves still had a very difficult life.

How Life Changed in America at the Turn of the Century:

- Black Cowboys of Texas: some former slaves did not want to work in the fields any longer, therefore many became cowboys on the Cattle Trails. They became known as the "Black Cowboys" and began proving themselves in the areas of horse riding, gun shooting, roping skills, and many other cowboy skills.
- Cattle Trails: in the late 1800s, there was a greater demand for beef in the eastern part of the United States. This meant that there needed to be a way to get the cattle from the ranches in Texas to cities in the East. Texas did not have any railroads at this time, so people had to take the cattle to railroads in Kansas. A railhead is an end point for a railroad. Cattle trails were formed, and cowboys would drive cattle north to cities along the railroads.

- William McKinley: US President responsible for getting the US involved in the Spanish-American War.
- Spanish American War: Cuba wanted its independence from Spain. The US supported Cuba and tried to help. The USS Maine sank when it was in Havana Harbor, Cuba. The US blamed Spain for the USS Maine sinking. The war was very quick as the United States won the war.
