

Introduction to the Honda ATC 70, 90 and 110 singles

The present Honda empire, which started in a wooden shack in 1947, now occupies a vast modern factory.

The first motorcycle to be imported into the UK in the early 60's, the 250 cc twin 'Dream', was the thin edge of the wedge which has been the Japanese domination of the motorcycle industry. Strange it looked too, to Western eyes, with pressed steel frame, and 'square' styling.

Since that time Honda has grown to its present formidable size and position as the largest current producer of motor cycles in the World. The range of road going models now encompasses engines of such widely differing configurations as single cylinder, transverse six cylinder, and V-twin types. The range of models available has also stretched beyond purely road-going machines, and now caters for all kinds of off-road sport, be it of a competitive or 'fun' nature. The tremendous upsurge of interests in the various types of 'dirt' riding, especially in the United States, over the last few years, has meant a vastly increased sales potential, and Honda, in common with Japanese rivals, offers an increasingly comprehensive range of machines to cope with this demand.

As an alternative to the various traditional two-wheeled machines, Honda introduced the ATC (All Terrain Cycle) onto the expanding off-road market in the US in 1971. Initially, it was powered by a 90 cc version of the robust, single overhead camshaft, four-stroke single-cylinder engine. In 1973, a 70 cc engined version, the ATC 70, joined the existing model in order to cater for the younger age group attracted to the unique styling of the ATC. The smaller engined version was not, however, as popular as the original model and was dropped from the range in 1974. It has now been re-introduced to the US market as from January 1978. The US market was also the first to receive the latest version on the ATC theme, the ATC

110. This was released there at the beginning of 1979, and has, at the time of writing, just been released to the UK market. The ATC 110 is similar in virtually all respects to its forerunners, and is intended to complement them and extend the range, rather than supersede the earlier models. The engine in this model is an enlarged version of the well-tried single cylinder motor. The almost indestructible capabilities of this engine type are admirably suited to the go-anywhere abilities of the ATC machines. It is not uncommon for them to cover extremely high mileages, often in arduous conditions and with limited servicing.

Complementing the strong engine/transmission package, is a robust pressed steel frame, a one-piece seat and rear mudguards unit, and the unusual but extremely practical three-wheeled configuration. The wheels carry enormous, softly inflated, off-road tyres that enable an ATC to traverse almost any type of obstacle or surface. Of several practical features, the dual-ratio (High and Low range) gearbox, the fully-enclosed drive chain, and the strategically placed air-cleaner intake, are worthy of special note.

The machine in general is totally functional, as befits a vehicle of this type, and as such is sensibly equipped; unnecessary gadgetry does not feature on an ATC. Its inherent simplicity ensures ease of riding over difficult terrain, and ease of maintenance.

Taken as a whole, the ATC range represents Honda's extremely successful attempt to produce an appealing vehicle to riders of all age groups, who desire to take to the 'dirt' with a recreation or 'fun' machine. At the same time it is capable of providing cheap and reliable transport for people such as farmers, whose unusual needs can be catered for admirably by such a device as the All Terrain Cycle.
