performance of most tasks with one hand typically the right is a uniquely human characteristic Not only do people prefer to use one hand rather than the other but also they usually perform tasks faster and more accurately with this hand The study of manual asymmetries and what such performance differences between the two hands reveal about brain organization and motor function has been a topic of considerable research over the last several decades The aim of this Research Topic is to review and further explore the origins of manual asymmetries and their relationship to handedness unimanual and bimanual motor performance and brain function The articles included here involve original research conducted in humans or non human models species as well as theoretical perspectives review articles and meta analyses Digital Strategy Framework Amit Prabhu,2024-02-22 Business incumbents constantly face disruption threats Most of them have embarked on the digital transformation journey Around 70 percent of transformation projects fail One of the many reasons of failure is a lack of clear and concrete Digital Strategy This book contains a comprehensive Digital Strategy Framework for business incumbents providing a step by step guidance during the strategy creation and execution phases Though anyone can read and derive benefits from this book it is primarily for executives strategists transformation drivers change agents leaders and managers Its success lies in how effectively they apply the framework at their workplace This book is not just about information it s all about transformation Code of Federal Regulations ,2005 Biennial Report of the State Board of Education of the State of Michigan from ... to ... Frances Kamhi,Sara Arganda Carreras,Mathieu Lihoreau,2023-10-02 Animal groups often display striking collective organization which relies on social interactions These interactions require neural substrates supporting the exchange of information among individuals and the processing of this information The social brain hypothesis suggested from neuroanatomical findings in primates posits that increasing levels of sociality involve a higher investment in neural tissue to cope with social information However distributed cognition and swarm intelligence might alleviate the cognitive load on the individuals and potentially reduce their neural requirements Research on social insects which are an exemplar of collective action has so far produced mixed results Individual cognition and collective action have received a lot of attention and much progress has been done in each of those fields however much less is understood about how the two interact Our goal is to aggregate theoretical and experimental research exploring the links between the complexity of individual and collective behaviors Experimental research testing the social brain hypothesis showed little support for a general explanation across the animal kingdom The relationship between the cognitive abilities of animals and their social interactions are much more complex than previously thought and tackling this problem requires a better knowledge of the fundamental mechanisms underpinning socio cognitive tasks What is the information used by the animals during social interactions How much information is necessary How many neurons and which neural circuits are required for processing this information What neural connections are important Do these social interactions involve memory formation How do the cognitive requirements and neural circuits vary between group members Answering these questions will bring considerable insights into the cognitive complexity involved for social and collective behaviors It will also advance our understanding of inter individual cognitive variability and division of labor in most socially advanced species This Research Topic will be a unique forum for researchers from different fields neurogenetics neuro ethology evolutionary ecology cognitive ecology collective animal behavior computational modeling working on different species to present up to date advances on the physiological correlates of social behavior and delineate future directions for the field of social neuroethology We welcome contributions on any aspect of the cognitive requirements of social and collective behaviors from molecular cellular and circuit level approaches to how individuals contribute to group action at the behavioral level Specific areas of interest include but are not limited to studies on the neural underpinnings of division of labor neuromodulation or neurogenetics of social behaviors the neural circuits and neuroanatomical basis of group action and how social signals affect learning and behavior We encourage submissions that present original research and review evidence or compare data from multiple species We hope to include work from different disciplines and on a wide range of species including model non model and wild animals with the aim of gaining insight into the patterns of neural investment in individual cognition
