Parasitism: Parasitism is the relationship between a parasite and its host. Parasites are organisms that live on or inside a host organism and derive nutrients from it. Parasitism can be harmful to the host, but it is not always so. Some parasites, such as the tapeworm, can cause serious illness in humans. Others, such as the malaria parasite, can be fatal. However, some parasites, such as the roundworm, can be beneficial to the host. For example, the roundworm can help to control the population of other parasites in the gut.
