These data demonstrate a strong, positive relationship between the number of years of education and the probability of being employed. The relationship is particularly strong for those with less than a high school diploma, and for those with a high school diploma but no college degree. The relationship is weaker for those with a college degree or more education.

"The new system is designed to be used by a single person, and it is designed to be used in a variety of environments, including in the field, in the laboratory, and in the classroom."

The screenshot shows a presentation slide with the title "Introduction" at the top. Below the title is a diagram illustrating a system architecture. The diagram consists of a central box labeled "System" which is connected to several external components. On the left, there is a box labeled "User". On the right, there is a box labeled "Database". Below the "System" box, there is a box labeled "Network". The connections suggest a flow of data or control between these components. The slide is part of a presentation, as indicated by the navigation icons at the bottom.
