Ultrasonic Destruction of Surfactants L. Weavers,J. Frim,J. Rathman,G. Pee,2003-12-01 This research focused on the use of sonication to destroy surfactants and surface tension properties in industrial wastewaters that affect traditional water treatment processes We have investigated the sonochemical destruction of surfactants and a chelating agent to understand the release of metals from surfactants during sonication In addition the effects of physical properties of surfactants and the effect of ultrasonic frequency were investigated to gain an understanding of the factors affecting degradation Successful partial or total destruction of surfactants resulting in the release of metals bound to surfactants may result in a significant cost savings of treatment plants

Identifying and Controlling Municipal Wastewater Odor Phase II Gregory M. Adams,Jay Witherspoon,2004-03-01 This project was undertaken in response to needs by the wastewater treatment industry to better understand the generation of odors from biosolids produced by wastewater treatment plants WWTPs Its primary objective is to begin to establish relationships between WWTP process parameters and biosolids odors so that more effective techniques for minimizing biosolids odors can be developed The project consisted of a detailed field study involving extensive sampling and analyses at 11 WWTPs across North America with capacities from 13 to 350 million gallons per day mgd Biosolids samples were collected from the WWTPs at a number of sampling points which were chosen to represent a complete snapshot of biosolids generation and handling at each WWTP The sampling points started with influent wastewater proceeded through primary and secondary clarification and continued through digestion dewatering and onsite storage of dewatered biosolids cake Laboratory scale anaerobic storage tests were conducted to simulate odor development of biosolids in storage prior to their beneficial reuse or disposal A battery of analyses were performed on the biosolids samples by the participating utility laboratories commercial laboratories and specialized university laboratories The analytical data were evaluated and compared with process and operation parameters at each participating WWTP

Merrill,2003-06-30

The purpose of this research project was to examine construction projects that successfully reduced Rainfall Dependent Infiltration Inflow RDII The research began with a literature review of all published records describing RDII removal projects Initially the review identified many projects however subsequent evaluation of available information revealed several important realities First most RDII removal projects in the country go undocumented Second of the RDII removal project summaries that have been published few provide good data Third data gathering and analyses for this report were hampered by lack of documentation lost or unavailable monitoring data and weaknesses in monitoring techniques Projects with sufficient information describing the conditions before the RDII removal project received a detailed analysis In all the case studies from the six agencies presented in this report 1 document before and after RDII levels 2 quantify the RDII reduction achieved and 3 describe the cost effectiveness of the removal As more than one project was documented for some agencies a total of 12 RDII projects received review The projects examined include both those that successfully reduced RDII and those that did not In general the conclusion was that utilities run the risk of not removing significant RDII unless they address private sewer laterals The only cases examined where significant RDII was removed were those that addressed private sewers or inflow sources A major recommendation of this report was to establish a standard reporting protocol for documenting RDII removal projects This protocol details what specific information should be provided when documenting an RDII removal project and how to perform an evaluation of RDII removal effectiveness The protocol touches on issues ranging from flow meter maintenance to statistical analysis of flow data By using the proper documentation recommended in this report communities allow others who are preparing to perform similar work to examine and utilize the results of any RDII removal project This publication can also be purchased and downloaded via Pay Per View on Water Intelligence Online click on the Pay Per View icon below
