Environmental Protection Agency's State-of-the-Science Evaluation of Nonmonotonic Dose-Response Relationships as they Apply to Endocrine Disruptors National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life

Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Committee to Review EPA's State of the Science Paper on Nonmonotonic Dose Response, 2014-05-27 Potential health effects from chemicals that disrupt endocrine function pose an environmental health concern because of their ability to interfere with normal hormone function in human and wildlife populations The endocrine system regulates biological processes throughout the body and is sensitive to small changes in hormone concentrations Endocrine disruptor research has focused primarily on chemicals that affect three hormone pathways that play important roles in reproduction and development the estrogen androgen and thyroid hormone pathways Some of this research has identified dose response relationships that have nonmonotonic curves Nonmonotonic dose response curves NMDRs are of concern because they do not follow the usual assumption made in toxicology that as dose decreases the response also decreases The existence of NMDRs has been a controversial topic for decades and there has been considerable debate about their implications for how chemicals are tested and for how risks from such chemicals are assessed Toxicity tests are designed to identify hazards and to characterize dose response relationships so tests are aimed at finding a high dose that elicits a response and dose response is explored by testing lower doses spaced to identify statistically a no or lowest observed adverse effect level The concern for NMDRs is that such studies as currently designed might not detect the inflection of the dose response curve if only a few doses are tested or if the change in inflection occurs below the range of doses tested Another concern is that some NMDRs are found for biological effects that are not usually evaluated in toxicity tests If current testing strategies are inadequate to account for NMDRs changes to risk assessment practices might be necessary To help address these issues the U S Environmental Protection Agency EPA developed a draft State of the Science Evaluation Nonmonotonic Dose Responses as they Apply to Estrogen Androgen and Thyroid Pathways and EPA Testing and Assessment Procedures EPA asked the National Research Council to conduct an independent review of this evaluation to ensure that it is scientifically sound and of high quality Review of Environmental Protection Agency's State of the Science Evaluation of Nonmonotonic Dose Response as they Apply to Endocrine Disruptors evaluates whether EPA's evaluation presents a scientifically sound and high quality analysis of the literature on NMDRs This report reviews how well

the EPA evaluation described how the assessment was performed whether consistent methods and criteria were applied in the analysis of different evidence streams and whether appropriate methods were applied to evaluating the evidence The report makes recommendations to improve EPA's process and strengthen the evaluation

Millennial Culture and Communication Pedagogies Andrew Sutherland, Michael G. Strawser, 2018-11-15 This book examines the ways in which faculty and staff at the higher education level teach and communicate with their millennial students and colleagues The contributors address how millennials academic and non academic interests and everyday performances within and outside of higher education influence how faculty and staff communicate with them This book delves into how millennials can become more adaptable in their communication with others in society especially in higher education be it from different generations or cultures that may or may not communicate the way they do The contributors argue that millennial culture should be carefully studied by instructors researchers and administrators to create a better classroom and educational experience and also improve the level of communication among these constituencies Policy-Making in the GCC Neil Quilliam, Mark C.

Thompson, 2017-09-11 The GCC is a major player in the post 2011 reordering of the Middle East Despite the rise in prominence of individual Gulf states especially Kuwait Qatar Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates and the growth of the GCC as a collective entity surprisingly little attention has been paid to the actual mechanics of policy making in the region This book analyses the vital role that institutions are coming to play in shaping policy in the Gulf Arab states The research coincides with two key developments that have given institutions new importance in the policy process the emergence of a new generation of leaders in the Gulf and the era of low oil prices Both developments along with dramatic demographic change have compelled state and citizens to re evaluate the nature of the social contract that binds them together Contributors assess the changing relationship between state and citizen and evaluate the role that formal and informal institutions play in mediating such change and informing policy The book shows how academic social and economic institutions are responding to the increasingly complex process of decision making where citizens demand better services and further empowerment and states are obliged to seek wider counsel although wanting to retain ultimate authority With contributions from both academics and practitioners this book will be highly relevant for researchers and policymakers alike
