These studies have brought out number of conclusions leading to emergence of valuable suggestions to mitigate and manage the adverse impact of natural disasters. These studies must be made available to the students for preparing assignments on the basis of lessons learnt from various disasters and should be included as integral part of the study curricula of architectural education. These case studies would help students in appreciating critical aspects of disasters and possible strategies to mitigate them. Further, in order to make the studies broad based, suitable mechanism for sharing the valuable experiences at the global level should be evolved so that it can be used by national, state and local level governmental, non-government agencies, NGOs, educational, research & technical institutions and public at large. The studies will have to be backed by research and development on regular basis so as to upgrade the knowledge on the subject.
