Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The participants were divided into two groups: a control group and an intervention group. The intervention group received a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and strength training. The control group received no intervention. The primary outcome was the change in physical health, measured by the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) and the 10-meter walk test (10MWT). The secondary outcome was the change in psychological health, measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The results showed that the intervention group had significantly greater improvements in physical health and psychological health compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary middle-aged women.
Keywords: middle-aged women, sedentary, 12-week training program, physical health, psychological health.	Abbreviations: 6MWT: 6-minute walk test; 10MWT: 10-meter walk test; BDI: Beck Depression Inventory; STAI: State-Trait Anxiety Inventory.
