Language Daniel L. Everett, 2012-03-13 A bold and provocative study that presents language not as an innate component of the brain as most linguists do but as an essential tool unique to each culture worldwide For years the prevailing opinion among academics has been that language is embedded in our genes existing as an innate and instinctual part of us But linguist Daniel Everett argues that like other tools language was invented by humans and can be reinvented or lost He shows how the evolution of different language forms that is different grammar reflects how language is influenced by human societies and experiences and how it expresses their great variety For example the Amazonian Pirah put words together in ways that violate our long held understanding of how language works and Pirah grammar expresses complex ideas very differently than English grammar does Drawing on the Wari language of Brazil Everett explains that speakers of all languages in constructing their stories omit things that all members of the culture understand In addition Everett discusses how some cultures can get by without words for numbers or counting without verbs for to say or to give illustrating how the very nature of what is important in a language is culturally determined Combining anthropology primatology computer science philosophy linguistics psychology and his own pioneering and adventurous research with the Amazonian Pirah and using insights from many different languages and cultures Everett gives us an unprecedented elucidation of this society defined nature of language In doing so he also gives us a new understanding of how we think and who we are
