- (1) Pressure, gas careful selection in the following points:
 (1) The pressure of conventional refrigerant(R22) model and some of the piping and installation and service tools are special.(See the table below)
 (2) Especially, when replacing a conventional refrigerant(R22) model with a new refrigerant R407C model, always replace the conventional piping and flare nuts with the R407C, piping and flare nuts.
- (2) Models that use refrigerant R407C have a different charging port thread diameter to prevent crossmixing with conventional refrigerant and for safety. Therefore, about
 (1) The R407C model, use the R407C charging pipe and flare nut.
- (3) Be more careful that foreign matter (oil, water, etc.) does not enter the piping than with refrigerant(R22) models. Also, when storing the piping, securely seal the opening by plugging.
- (4) When changing the refrigerant, take into account the slight change in the composition of the gas and liquid phases, and always change from the liquid phase side whose composition

It is necessary to use stainless copper pipes and it is clear that the amount of material will be less than 40 mg/g of Cu. We must use copper pipes having a collapse, deformation or abrasion portion; especially on the inner surface. Other rules, the expansion value of capillary tubes may become relevant with the amount of Cu.

- are used and the resulting pressure is higher than the specified value.
- If the existing material is used, the pressure inside the refrigerant ducts will rise and cause leakage, injury, or damage to the system (see Figure 1).
- (b) When installing and evacuating the air conditioning, do not mix gases other than the specified refrigerant(s) to enter the refrigerant ducts.
- If an air filling operation is performed, the pressure inside the ducts will rise to an abnormally high value and cause leakage, injury, or damage.

These authors also found that the relationship between the two variables was not linear, but rather, it was curvilinear. The relationship was positive and significant at low levels of the independent variable, but it became negative and non-significant at high levels of the independent variable. This finding is consistent with the theory of diminishing returns, which suggests that the benefits of an intervention will be greatest at low levels of implementation and will diminish as the level of implementation increases.

1. `get` method: `get(key)` returns the value associated with the key. If the key is not found, it returns `None`.
 2. `set` method: `set(key, value)` sets the value for the key. If the key is not found, it adds a new entry.
 3. `delete` method: `delete(key)` removes the entry for the key. If the key is not found, it does nothing.
 4. `keys` method: `keys()` returns a list of all the keys in the dictionary.
 5. `values` method: `values()` returns a list of all the values in the dictionary.
 6. `items` method: `items()` returns a list of all the items (key-value pairs) in the dictionary.
 7. `update` method: `update(other_dict)` updates the dictionary with the items from `other_dict`.
 8. `pop` method: `pop(key)` returns the value for the key and removes the entry. If the key is not found, it raises a `KeyError`.
 9. `popitem` method: `popitem()` removes and returns an arbitrary item (key-value pair) from the dictionary.
 10. `clear` method: `clear()` removes all items from the dictionary.
 11. `copy` method: `copy()` returns a shallow copy of the dictionary.
 12. `fromkeys` method: `fromkeys(seq, value)` returns a new dictionary with keys from `seq` and values from `value`.
 13. `get` method with default: `get(key, default)` returns the value for the key, or `default` if the key is not found.
 14. `setdefault` method: `setdefault(key, default)` returns the value for the key, or `default` if the key is not found and sets the value to `default`.
 15. `update` method with keyword arguments: `update(key1=value1, key2=value2, ...)` updates the dictionary with the items from the keyword arguments.
 16. `pop` method with default: `pop(key, default)` returns the value for the key and removes the entry, or `default` if the key is not found.
 17. `popitem` method with default: `popitem(default)` removes and returns an arbitrary item (key-value pair) from the dictionary, or `default` if the dictionary is empty.
 18. `clear` method with default: `clear(default)` removes all items from the dictionary, or `default` if the dictionary is empty.
 19. `copy` method with default: `copy(default)` returns a shallow copy of the dictionary, or `default` if the dictionary is empty.
 20. `fromkeys` method with default: `fromkeys(seq, value, default)` returns a new dictionary with keys from `seq` and values from `value`, or `default` if the key is not found.
