Abstract The authors investigated whether the presence of a social support system during the first year of life predicts children's cognitive development at age 6. Data from the National Longitudinal Survey of Children and Youth (NLSCY) were used to examine the relationship between maternal social support and child cognitive outcomes. Results showed that children whose mothers had higher levels of social support during the first year of life had higher scores on measures of cognitive development at age 6. These findings suggest that social support may play a role in early childhood development.

1. What is the purpose of the study?
The purpose of the study is to investigate the effect of a new teaching method on student performance in mathematics.
2. What are the research objectives?
The research objectives are to compare the performance of students using the new teaching method with those using the traditional method, and to determine the factors that influence student performance.
3. What is the research hypothesis?
The research hypothesis is that students using the new teaching method will perform better than those using the traditional method.
4. What are the independent and dependent variables?
The independent variable is the teaching method (new vs. traditional), and the dependent variable is student performance (measured by test scores).
5. What is the research design?
The research design is a quasi-experimental design, where the researcher manipulates the independent variable and measures the effect on the dependent variable.
6. What are the data collection methods?
The data collection methods include pre-test, post-test, and follow-up tests, as well as observation and interviews.
7. What are the data analysis methods?
The data analysis methods include descriptive statistics, inferential statistics (t-test, ANOVA), and regression analysis.
8. What are the conclusions?
The conclusions are that the new teaching method has a positive effect on student performance, and that the factors that influence student performance are the teaching method, student motivation, and student ability.
9. What are the limitations of the study?
The limitations of the study are that the sample size is small, the study is a quasi-experimental design, and the results may not be generalizable to other contexts.
10. What are the recommendations for future research?
The recommendations for future research are to conduct a larger-scale study, to use a more rigorous experimental design, and to investigate the long-term effects of the new teaching method.
