

poverty, as he could have been forced to do so), though he might also use the metaphor to describe a priest and find it as one offered to the altar of Jerusalem (21), so he was possibly a descendant of priests, high priest during David's reign. Jeremiah received education from some houses of his supports at Anathoth (2 Kings 22-23). Thus, Jeremiah was from a small town, served a small city, and perhaps came from a modest plebeian background. He lived close enough to Jerusalem to understand its people, their worship, and their daily activities. He was far enough removed from Jerusalem that he was not afraid to criticize what he saw happening there.

Jeremiah had a difficult life. His message of repentance delivered at the temple was not received (7:1-13; 26:1-15). His house was placed against him (20:18-20), and the king would persecute him in the pursuit of his ministry (20:1-4; 27:21-28; 33:4-5; 37:1-17). He could not even be sure that he was a faithful prophet for the apparently false vision concerning Zedekiah, Hananiah (28:1; 29:1-4; 38:1-15), and those who felt an obligation toward him toward the king (38:17-23; 39:1-14). There were also two women in the outer back who supported him with their devotion (Jeremiah 1:16). Though the book does not reveal the time or place of Jeremiah's death, he presumably died in exile where he had been when he was exiled against his will after the fall of Jerusalem (43:1-7).

Many scholars have called Jeremiah the "weeping prophet." While he does occasionally use the term weepers (48:40-41; 43:18-19), and the depth of sorrow is greater than that of any other prophet in his warning that national nations regarding his warnings, Jeremiah was determined to deliver his message and not to weep. His message and warning were in danger of being the more famous of all his prophetic warnings. The people find something about his own conduct so long as Jeremiah is in Jerusalem (2:1). Thus, Jeremiah's weeping hardly was his main character. He could perhaps more accurately be called "the despairing prophet."

One of his personal motives in the composition of the book that bears his name, it was his need to remain involved in the production of what is now called the book of Jeremiah, for there were various reasons he could have given up the process. That Jeremiah and Baruch remained committed to composing the book is a testimony to their faith, as well as to the power of the Holy Spirit (1 Pet. 5:3).

Site

It is impossible to know exactly where the book of Jeremiah was first written. Jeremiah certainly had written a number of years of his life in the temple in the back, and the book is full of the temple. Thus, the book was probably composed in 587 B.C.

Theme

Jeremiah exhibits many great themes that were found, although in various capacity and weakness, in, as well as God's, determination to remain an international people for himself through the establishment of a new covenant.

People, Places, and Background

There is no major connection with any kind of activity in the time region of the book of Jeremiah in its present state or the specific location that led to its being read by the audience. The book is not tied to persons existing the end of Judah's rule and the coming of God's people to the land. In contrast to other prophets and books written to have helped a nation, of the multitude there in which they lived, God's message for those times and God's message for the future of the land and the nation.

Jeremiah lived during troubled times. He was a prophet during Israel's exile (587-586 B.C.). He was the last prophet in Judah's history (2 Kings 23:25-27). His death (2 Kings 24:20-21) marked the beginning of the end of the nation of Judah. Political, social, economic, moral, and spiritual decay led to the country's decline within one short decade. When prophets such as Nathan, Isaiah, and Amos, who ministered in Israel during the time.

During Israel's life the world political scene shifted greatly. Assyria had been the dominant world power was the empire of the Assyrian king, Tiglath-pileser III (746-727 B.C.), through Babylon, Assyria, and other nations that regularly challenged Israel. In 722 B.C., the Assyrians conquered Israel, the kingdom of Israel, and moved the king of Israel to Babylon. Israel's capital, Jerusalem, was destroyed in 587 B.C. and the king of Judah, Zedekiah, was taken into exile. The book of Jeremiah was written during this period of exile.

Jeremiah's life was marked by a great deal of suffering. He was a prophet of the Lord, and he was often persecuted by the people of his own nation. He was also a man of great faith and courage, and he was able to stand up to the king of his own nation. The book of Jeremiah is a powerful testimony to the power of God's word, and it is a book that should be read by all who seek to know the will of God.
