January 2018

- Automated design analysis
enabling product development

- Multi-physics simulation
analysis

Report highlights

Automating the engineering challenge today entails designing – making it harder to evaluate the impact of different design alternatives.

When the need to virtualize the product development lifecycle is taken into account, the need for a consolidated simulation platform is clear. Throughout the product lifecycle and design process, simulation has become an essential tool for ensuring that designs are delivered, production-ready, and that the platform is able to integrate design, engineering, and manufacturing.

Implementing a consolidated simulation platform enables the design team to deliver the product faster, with less risk, and with a more efficient design process.

As the design process moves from a single-physics to a multi-physics simulation, the need for a consolidated simulation platform becomes more apparent. Specifically, it will help in the design of the product, the design of the manufacturing process, and the design of the product lifecycle. The consolidated simulation platform will help in the design of the product, the design of the manufacturing process, and the design of the product lifecycle.
