Unmanned Systems (UxS) Control Segment (UCS) Architecture: Data Distribution Service (DDS) AS-4UCS Unmanned Systems Control Segment Architecture, 2016. This platform specific Interface Control Document ICD provides an example mapping to the Object Management Group's OMG Data Distribution Service DDS infrastructure middleware. The mapping is based on the Unmanned Systems UxS Control Segment UCS Architecture Model AS6518. A series of non-normative implementation choices have been made that are specific to this ICD. These implementation choices may not be appropriate for different system implementations. The machine-readable ICD and result of this mapping and implementation choices are provided with AIR6521. Use and understanding of this document assumes a working knowledge of the UCS Architecture, the model structure, and its contents. This document is the SAE publication of the Department of Defense UAS Control Segment UCS Architecture Interface Control Document Data Distribution Service DDS User Guide approved for Distribution A public release 15 S 1859. Computerized Interface Control Documents Keyvan Rahmani, 2012. Two ports are called compatible if the values of their attributes satisfy the compatibility constraints that have been defined for them. An interface can be established between two ports if they are compatible. Compatibility constraints are defined by different subsystem designers. They are transformed into interface control rules in order to be used to control the status of interfaces.

during a product development project The rules altogether constitute a knowledge base that can be used for compatibility checking The left hand sides of the rules in the knowledge base correspond to the compatibility constraints that have been defined for ports The right hand sides of the rules specify detection messages that alert designers about violations of compatibility constraints as well as their exact location
