Feudal Europe's Religious Influences

Directions: Read the paragraphs below and study the map carefully. Then answer the questions that follow.

The influence of the Latin Church—the Roman Catholic Church—grew in western Europe after 800. By 1000, at the end of the age of invasions, the Church's vision of a spiritual kingdom in feudal Europe was nearly realized.

A sign of the spread of Roman Christianity in western Europe was the increased presence of churches. The population of the continent was increasing rapidly—from around 14 million in 800 to 22 million in 950—and the need to accommodate all the new faithful caused a boom in religious buildings.

It was an era of new Roman Christian states. By 900 much of the Polish region had sided with Rome, as did that of Hungary around 995. Large sections of Scandinavia adopted the Latin Church by 1000. In the fifth century, Ireland became the “island of saints.” Then, between 980 and 990, Ireland helped bring England under the influence of Roman Christianity.

However, in 800, in far eastern Europe, the prince of Kiev received baptism from the Eastern Orthodox, or Byzantine, Church, as regions to the south had done in the eighth century. Disputes between the two wings of Christianity—headed by Constantinople and Rome—would soon separate the two domains.
