

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

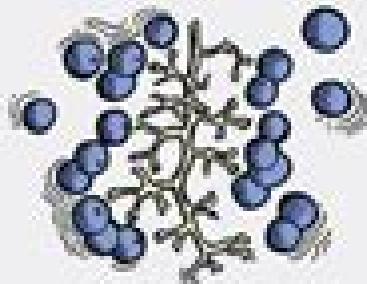

The easy guide to the wine-making process
in 12 simple steps for beginners

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) period is the best time to pick the grapes. It's during this time that the grapes are at their peak. The weather is usually warm and dry, which is ideal for the grapes to ripen.

Prepare grapes

Before the grapes can be used, they need to be prepared. This involves removing the stems and leaves, and then crushing the grapes to release the juice. The resulting juice is then filtered to remove any solids.

Clarification

Clarification is the process of removing any remaining solids from the juice. This is done by adding a small amount of a clarifying agent, such as egg whites or bentonite, and then filtering the juice through a fine mesh.

Press

After the fermentation process, the juice is pressed to remove any remaining solids. This is done by using a press, which applies pressure to the juice, forcing the solids out.

Fermentation

The juice is then placed in a fermentation vessel, where it is left to ferment. During this time, the yeast converts the sugars in the juice into alcohol. The fermentation process typically takes about two weeks.

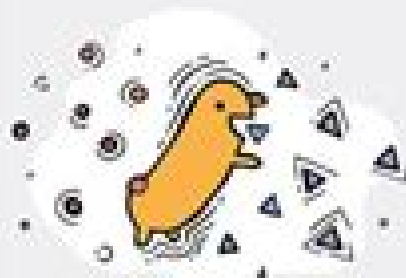

Add yeast

Before the juice can be fermented, it needs to be inoculated with yeast. This is done by adding a small amount of yeast to the juice. The yeast then begins to ferment the sugars in the juice, producing alcohol.

Bottling

Bottling is the final step in the wine-making process. The wine is poured into bottles, which are then sealed with a cork. The bottles are then stored in a cool, dark place for a period of time, allowing the wine to mature.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a process that occurs naturally in wine. It involves the conversion of malic acid into lactic acid, which gives the wine a softer, more rounded flavor. This process typically takes about two weeks.

Aging

After the wine has been bottled, it is often aged in wooden barrels. This allows the wine to develop a more complex flavor and a smoother texture. The aging process typically takes about six months to a year.

Blending

Blending is the process of combining different wines to create a new wine. This is done by taking small amounts of different wines and mixing them together. The resulting wine is then aged and bottled.

Bottle aging

Bottle aging is the final step in the wine-making process. The wine is left in the bottle for a period of time, allowing it to mature and develop a more complex flavor. This process typically takes about six months to a year.
