Kindergarten Panic Bailey A. Brown, 2025-08-19 How school choice reproduces inequality by creating gendered and socioeconomic decision making labor for parents School choice policies have proliferated in recent years with parents forced to navigate complex admission processes In New York City families have more options than ever before but the search for the right school has proven to be time consuming painstaking and anxiety provoking work In Kindergarten Panic Bailey Brown examines the experiences of parents as they search for elementary schools finding that socioeconomic inequalities and persistent disparities in resources information access and decision making power contribute to broad variation in how families develop and manage their school choice labor strategies The labor that parents invest in searching for schools is unevenly distributed and shaped by gender socioeconomic background and neighborhood contexts Drawing on interviews with more than a hundred parents of elementary school students in New York City Brown shows how inequality manifests itself as parents and students deal with the uncertainties of the school choice process By conceptualizing school decision making as labor she makes visible the often unseen work that goes into making educational decisions for children Brown argues that recognizing school choice as labor both deepens our theoretical understanding of the challenges families confront and identifies vast disparities in parents labor across socioeconomic and gender divisions If parents continue to be charged with searching for schools we must take seriously how school choice policies reproduce the kind of inequality they are intended to reduce and we must invest in providing equitable access to high quality public schooling for all families

From Exclusivity to Exclusion: The LD Experience of Privileged Parents Chris Hale,2011-11-12 What is lived experience at the intersection of privilege and disability More specifically what are the experiences of privileged parents of a child with disability How does their child s disability impact their efforts to reproduce their advantage These and other questions inspired the research on which this book is based The plight of poor and marginalized parents of children with disabilities has received considerable scholarly attention yet the experiences of their counterparts at the opposite end of the socioeconomic spectrum have garnered scant notice For parents at the bottom rung of society their child s disability becomes yet another compounding marker of oppression For parents of means and influence disability represents an ontological contradiction While they are oppressors in that they reap the benefits of inequitable and oppressive social structures they are also oppressed by ableism and other systems of societal bias The product of an ethnographic case study this book trains a phenomenological lens on the lived experience of this contradiction The participants in this research are privileged urban parents of a 14 year old boy with dyslexia Their account of the struggles they faced over the three years their son spent in a mainstream private school is the focus of analysis and discussion Despite their efforts including lavish expenditures of economic and cultural capital the school community s responses to the child s disability and subsequent academic failure resulted in iterated enactments of symbolic and physical segregation and eventual banishment Their son s dyslexia threatened the collective investment in normality his academic failure threatened the underlying assumptions of schooling and his parents advocacy challenged the symbolic authority of school professionals Cumulative List of Organizations Described in Section 170 \(c\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 ,1958
