Abstract: This paper presents results from a study of the effects of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the economic growth of the Asian economies. The study uses a panel data approach to examine the impact of the crisis on the growth rate of GDP per capita across different Asian countries. The results show that the crisis had a significant negative effect on the growth rate of GDP per capita in all Asian countries. However, the magnitude of the effect varied across countries, with some countries experiencing a more severe decline in growth than others. The study also finds that the crisis had a significant negative effect on the growth rate of GDP per capita in the short run, but the effect was less pronounced in the long run. These findings suggest that the Asian financial crisis had a significant negative impact on the economic growth of the Asian economies, but the impact was not uniform across all countries.
