

The narrator is sad that Holly never sends him her address, especially because he has so many things to tell her. For starters, he has sold several stories. He's also heard that Rusty and Mag are getting divorced. As for himself, he's moving out of the brownstone because it feels "traumatised." Most of all, though, he wants to tell Holly that he found her cat. For weeks after Holly left, the narrator went to Spanish Harlem to search for the lost animal. Finally, he found the cat sitting inside somebody's apartment, perched on the window of what looked like a cozy room. The narrator couldn't help but wonder what the cat's name was, feeling sure that he finally had one now. After all, the cat had clearly found a home in which he belonged. And wherever she is, the narrator thinks, he hopes that Holly has, too.

In many ways, Breakfast at Tiffany's is a story about the natural desire to belong. Even animals, Capote intimates, hope to find the contentment that comes along with settling into a pleasant and fulfilling life. As for Holly, it remains unclear whether she will ever manage to attain what her nameless cat now has, ultimately intimating that, though everyone yearns for this kind of fulfillment, such happiness and assurance are still rather rare and elusive things.
