Abstract Background: While the need for training in new technology skills is widely acknowledged, training is often not available, and therefore people in military and other organizations cannot take advantage of these opportunities. The objective of this study was to develop an algorithm to predict which people in the organization are most in need of training, and to determine whether, with the introduction of the algorithm, training opportunities were more effectively targeted to those in greatest need. Methods: The training needs of 1000 people in the United States Coast Guard were assessed using a questionnaire, and the results were compared with the results of a training needs assessment conducted by the Coast Guard.

TABLE 1. Summary of the 1997-1998 Survey of the Health of the Nation

Dr. Schuchman, the program director, says the program is composed of 100 "modules" and usually is delivered as a continuous 10-day course in a classroom setting. The 100 modules include everything a health care worker needs to know about following specific infection control practices in the hospital environment. "It's not a 'one-and-done' deal," says Schuchman. "It's a continuous learning process." In following the program, he says, "the participants are in a continuous learning process."
