Light itself is characterized as a stream or ray that travels in straight lines if the case of "unobstructed propagation" unless broken by reflection or refraction. Light rays travelling in this medium but a like transparent medium is different medium, part of it is reflected back into the same medium (according to the law of reflection) (2) the other part that is also transparent part of the light will enter that medium, but the other half change. This process is called as the process of refraction. However this law of refraction.

Law of Reflection - the same principle, stating that when a light ray strikes any mirror, the angle of incidence, θ_i , is equal to the angle of reflection, θ_r . The light ray is measured from the normal, the line off the surface. This is true for all surfaces (curved surfaces which have components of flat areas, such as the human eye-lens system). If the incident is spherical or circular, then the reflected ray will either converge to a point (focus) or diverge as if it came from a point (virtual focus).
