James V: Katherine Rona Munro, 2025-04-15. Katherine Hamilton is a nineteen-year-old woman facing arrest and trial in the King's court with only her quick wit as defense against execution. James V: Katherine is a dramatic interpretation of key events during a turbulent time in Scotland's history, events that changed the nation forever. It is also a play filled with hidden histories, deft comedy, and a secret love story between two young women. Rona Munro's renowned James Plays are a breathtaking series of plays set during the reigns of Scotland's generations of Stewart kings. Each play stands alone as a thrilling depiction of a moment in Scottish history, full of playful wit and boisterous theatricality. Taken together, the cycle is a uniquely compelling narrative of a nation tussling with its past and future. James V: Katherine was first staged at Capital Theatres The Studio in April 2024, directed by Orla O'Loughlin, before embarking on a Scottish tour. It was a co-production between Raw Material and Capital Theatres, who previously produced James IV: Queen of the Fight. Rona Munro is a writer who has written extensively for stage, radio, film, and television. Earlier works in the James Plays cycle, I and II, have been performed at the National Theatre in London, across the UK, and internationally, and have won Evening Standard and Writers Guild of Great Britain Awards.
