Figure 1-1 The SketchUp window. The SketchUp window is a floating window that can be moved to the side or top. The Component window shows the list of components in the model. The Outliner window shows the hierarchy of the model. See page 111 for more information on the SketchUp interface.

In addition to the three main windows, SketchUp also includes several other windows, such as the Component window that's open in Figure 1-1. You can open and close these as needed by using the Window menu. With the tools in these windows, you'll apply color and shading to your models, select prefabricated components, add shadows and lighting effects, and export your project.

Don't Be Afraid to Play

When you get started, don't be afraid to play. SketchUp is a 3D modeling software that's designed to be fun and easy to use. It's a great way to learn about 3D modeling and to create your own 3D models. Don't be afraid to play with the software and to experiment with different tools and techniques. The more you play, the more you'll learn about SketchUp and the more you'll enjoy using it.

It's important to remember that SketchUp is a 3D modeling software, not a 2D drawing software. This means that you can create 3D models of objects and scenes, and you can view them from different angles. This is a great way to visualize your ideas and to create realistic-looking 3D models.

SketchUp's menu bar is located at the top of the window, and it includes the File, Edit, Window, and Help menus. SketchUp's View menu is a little different from the ones in most programs (Figure 1-2). The View menu has items in the SketchUp window that you can show or hide, including things like the drawing guides, the scene, measurement tools, and view different models. If you're looking for tools that change over time of the SketchUp window, such as a View or the tool, look under the View menu.
