Producing Precarity Curtis Marez, 2025-08-26 The hidden cost of TV production for communities of color Producing Precarity is a long overdue examination of the television industry's practice of offshoring production to impoverished sites within the US The author Curtis Marez focuses on state efforts to attract film and TV producers to poor places with tax incentives discounted public lands and subsidized infrastructures He argues that these efforts result in the redistribution of wealth from poor people of color Indigenous people and other taxpayers to Los Angeles based media makers while also diverting money that could be used for education and health care to the wealthy The popular series produced in these places such as Breaking Bad The Watchmen Lovecraft County The Walking Dead and Vida are praised by critics and awards organizations and highlighted by streaming services for challenging genre casting and narrative conventions However many of these shows rely on racialized and gendered low wage labor for production and diversity equity and inclusion representations can sometimes perpetuate repression such as depicting police as diversity champions Producing Precarity examines how contemporary streaming shows from these areas promote racial inequality in ideology and content as well as materially through their local production methods and perceptually through streaming distribution modes that discourage viewers from understanding how TV is made Marez also provides examples of local resistance including movements against a police training center and a film studio in Atlanta as well as anti gentrification movements in Latinx neighborhoods of LA

Videoland Daniel Herbert, 2014-01-24 Videoland offers a comprehensive view of the tangible phase of consumer video when Americans largely accessed movies as material commodities at video rental stores Video stores served as a vital locus of movie culture from the early 1980s until the early 2000s changing the way Americans socialized around movies and collectively made movies meaningful When films became tangible as magnetic tapes and plastic discs movie culture flowed out from the theater and the living room entered the public retail space and became conflated with shopping and salesmanship In this process video stores served as a crucial embodiment of movie culture s historical move toward increased flexibility adaptability and customization In addition to charting the historical rise and fall of the rental industry Herbert explores the architectural design of video stores the social dynamics of retail encounters the video distribution industry the proliferation of video recommendation guides and the often surprising persistence of the video store as an adaptable social space of consumer culture Drawing on ethnographic fieldwork cultural geography and archival research Videoland provides a wide ranging exploration of the pivotal role video stores played in the history of motion pictures and is a must read for students and scholars of media history

Architecture in Transition Kelly Crossman,1987-11-01 However behind the public face of design architectural life in Canada during the 1880s and 1890s was in turmoil The Canadian public had lost confidence in its designers students were forced to study abroad to secure a first class education professional rivalry was unscrupulous architectural competitions a scandal American architects and their architecture were the fashion These things changed but not before the world of the Canadian architect had been turned on its head replaced by one which resembled the world of contemporary architects with professional organisations regulated standards formalised education centred in the universities and the belief that Canadian architecture should reflect local climates culture and geography Kelly Crossman provides the first analysis of this period Beginning with a review of the architectural milieu in Toronto and Montreal in the 1880s he traces the rise of professionalism as an idea and architectural nationalism as a goal His analysis is more a history of architectural ideas than a survey of forms It places the architecture of these years in an historical and ideological context demonstrating that it developed with its own logic in response to national and international factors During the two decades after 1885 Canadian architects grappled with problems whose long term implications they could not have foreseen the role of the architect in industrialised society the need to accommodate and integrate applied science and the need to express their own and their country s personality in architectural form By the beginning of this century they had begun to find their own voice The story of this process will be of interest not just to students and scholars but to anyone interested in the development of Canada and its architecture
