Technology Choices Diane E. Bailey,Paul M. Leonardi,2015-01-30 An analysis of the occupational factors that shape the technology choices made by people who perform the same type of work Why do people who perform largely the same type of work make different technology choices in the workplace An automotive design engineer working in India for example finds advanced information and communication technologies essential allowing him to work with far flung colleagues a structural engineer in California relies more on paper based technologies for her everyday work and a software engineer in Silicon Valley operates on multiple digital levels simultaneously all day continuing after hours on a company supplied home computer and network connection In Technology Choices Diane Bailey and Paul Leonardi argue that occupational factors rather than personal preference or purely technological concerns strongly shape workers technology choices Drawing on extensive field work a decade s worth of observations and interviews in seven engineering firms in eight countries Bailey and Leonardi challenge the traditional views of technology choices technological determinism and social constructivism Their innovative occupational perspective allows them to explore how external forces shape ideas beliefs and norms in ways that steer individuals to particular technology choices albeit in somewhat predictable and generalizable ways They examine three relationships at the heart of technology choices human to technology technology to technology and human to human An occupational perspective they argue helps us not only to understand past technology choices but also to predict future ones

What About Mozart? What About Murder? Howard S. Becker, 2014-08-22 In 1963 Howard S Becker gave a lecture about deviance challenging the then conventional definition that deviance was inherently criminal and abnormal and arguing that instead deviance was better understood as a function of labeling At the end of his lecture a distinguished colleague standing at the back of the room puffing a cigar looked at Becker quizzically and asked What about murder Isn't that really deviant It sounded like Becker had been backed into a corner Becker however wasn't defeated Reasonable people he countered differ over whether certain killings are murder or justified homicide and these differences vary depending on what kinds of people did the killing In What About Mozart What About Murder Becker uses this example along with many others to demonstrate the different ways to study society one that uses carefully investigated specific cases and another that relies on speculation and on what he calls killer questions aimed at taking down an opponent by citing invented cases Becker draws on a lifetime of sociological research and wisdom to show in helpful detail how to use a variety of kinds of cases to build sociological knowledge With his trademark conversational flair and informal personal perspective Becker provides a guide that researchers can use to produce general sociological knowledge through case studies He champions research that has enough data to go beyond guesswork and urges researchers to avoid what he calls skeleton cases which use fictional stories that pose as scientific evidence Using his long career as a backdrop Becker delivers a winning book that will surely change the way scholars in many fields approach their research
