BY THE AUTHOR

Are you confident that the food you serve is safe?

You can be certain as long as you understand what you are doing through applying standard food practices in the kitchen and your own good food sense and then your kitchen's management and staff are good hygienic.

Nothing is better than good food and it is better to have good food and hygiene in the kitchen than to have good food and poor hygiene.

Good food, hygiene and safety is a permanent provision in your kitchen. HACCP principles

Bolton, 2012-12-06 In recent years there has been growing pressure for consistent product quality and a need for companies to demonstrate sound quality management practices in order to meet Due Diligence requirements of both legislation and the quality assurance practices of customers. It has become accepted that operating to the requirements of the international standard for quality management BS EN ISO 900 goes a long way towards meeting these needs. The objective of this book is to explain the requirements of the standard to offer advice about achieving those requirements and to indicate what the assessors will look for at assessment time. It is important that certification to the standard is sought to support achievement of company objectives and not the reverse and of course the standard can apply to organizations and services just as much as to companies. Thus the word company in the text should be treated accordingly. Illustrative material has been presented under the logo of a fictitious company Quality Food Services. In this context QFS does not bear any relationship whatsoever to any identically or similarly named business that may exist. Readers will find it helpful to read the book with a copy of the standard to hand and are strongly encouraged to read the complete text before taking any steps to prepare for certification to the standard.

Yahia, 2011-06-30 While products such as bananas pineapples kiwifruit and citrus have long been available to consumers in temperate zones new fruits such as lychee longan carambola and mangosteen are now also entering the market. Tropical and subtropical fruits are particularly vulnerable to postharvest losses and are also transported long distances for sale. Therefore maximising their quality postharvest is essential and there have been many recent advances in this area. Many tropical fruits are processed further into purees juices and other value added products so quality optimisation of processed products is also important. Statistical Quality Control for the Food Industry Merton Hubbard, 2013-11-11 Considering the ability of food processing companies to consistently manufacture safe foods with uniform quality over the past 20 or 30 years without these new tools and new systems one might expect that quality control improvements would be marginal. On the other hand these changes have already provided substantial opportunities for process and product improvement. This second edition is intended to update the basic concepts and discuss some of the new ones.

Preface to the First Edition If an automobile tire leaks or an electric light switch fails if we are short changed at a department store or erroneously billed for phone calls not made if a plane departure is delayed due to a mechanical failure these are rather ordinary annoyances which we have come to accept as normal occurrences. Contrast this with failure of a food product. If foreign matter is found in a food if a product is discolored or crushed if illness or discomfort occurs when a food product is eaten the consumer reacts with anger fear and sometimes mass hysteria The offending product is often returned to the seller or a disgruntled letter is written to the manufacturer In an extreme case an expensive law suit may be filed against the company The reaction is almost as severe if the failure is a difficult to open package or a leaking container There is no tolerance for failure of food products
