11 pages | 2733 words

Most families start the same way. Two people fall in love and have kids and then their kids fall in love and have kids and the line continues. It's the roots of our families that make us all completely different, where we come from, who we are and what we've experienced. My family has its roots scattered throughout many countries in Europe and some in Africa. My mother's family origins can be traced back to Norway, Scotland, and England. My father's family roots are traced back to the United Kingdom and South Africa. When my family left Europe to come to America they all experienced different things. My families immigration ranges from the early 1600s to the late 1990s. In the year 1905, Christian Moe, my great great grandpa, set off to America in search of new opportunities leaving behind his parents and his three brothers. He left Little Hamer, Norway at eighteen years old and entered into the United States through Ellis Island. My great great grandfather was one of more than twelve million people who immigrated to the United States through Ellis Island during the sixty two years it was open between 1892 and 1954. After working for over a year anywhere that he could find he sent money over to his family to help them make the journey over to him. In 1907, Ellis Island's busiest year, Christian's mom and dad and his three brothers, Maynard, Martin and Ole, arrived at the same immigration station. "Beginning in 1875 the federal government began taking a more active role in regulating and overseeing immigration" (Merrick and Houghton 10). Before immigrants came through Ellis Island they came in to the United States through Castle Garden immigration station until it was closed in 1890. With the change in station locations also came change in legislative framework to process immigrants and keep out the "undesirable element". "The law placed immigration at all ports of entry entirely under federal control. It required steamship companies to transport, at the company's expense, any immigrants rejected by the U.S. immigration authorities back to their country of origin. It added to the list of excluded aliens 'persons suffering from loathsome or dangerous contagious disease'" (Merrick and Houghton 15). When Christian immigrated he had no problem entering the United States, he was a strong and healthy young man who's ethnicity was not considered to be "undesirable". When his family arrived they were not looked down upon because of their ethnicity but because of Ole's condition. Uncle Ole had polio and could not walk well without the use of a cane. To enter into the country you had to go through different tests to see if you were fit to be here. One of the tests that Ole had to go through was that he had to show that he could enter into the country on his own. Back home in Norway he worked as an acrobat so he had very good upper body strength. He was able to enter into the country on his hands and knees using mostly his upper body strength. If Ole had been one...
