STUDENTS LEARN HOW QUESTIONS ARE WRITTEN

Question Design

An AP exam multiple-choice question is made up of the following

QUESTION DESIGN

Monitor to keep their reasoning, then spend to apply, strengthen, and

- Give students categorized items without them total each set of items and present
- Give students the stem list and have them on which they need clarification. Discuss
- Give students a short passage and ask the five items that would fit that passage.

Strategies for Improving Performance

1. Using a "stem" passage time with which students are already familiar, have students write multiple-choice items (questions) and fully (answers). Use common stems and the challenge-based format. Use the Revised Bloom's Taxonomy to help students set higher-order thinking skills for their questions.
2. Practice answering multiple-choice questions orally, first-hand by working students away from using distractors and patterns to working alone with only

TIPS & STRATEGIES

- As a bell-ringer, give students one item, tell and have them write the answer choices.
- As a summative, give students a choice of items write the answer choices for a group lesson.

3. Give students multiple-choice questions on the For example, if you are working on a topic, give them questions on that topic.
4. For questions students write, require them to explain or defend the correct answer.
5. Teach students to paraphrase (that's read and short) sections of difficult passages.
6. Model, model, model. You are the strongest model for how you think. Do a think-aloud your process for working with the passage, from which a portion, from which. The AP test strategies are used.
7. Do model your passage practice with students and encourage students to
