

Grammar: Blue Book pages 1–5; 31, 32, 33 on page 5

Gender: Purple Book page 9

All Latin nouns have a gender. For the vast majority of nouns, this gender never varies. For now, you need to learn the gender of all of your nouns when you learn the vocabulary.

There are three genders (there is also a fourth you'll learn later): masculine (masc. or m.), feminine (fem. or f.), and neuter (neut. or n.).

In the 1st declension, all nouns are feminine unless they name a masculine person; those nouns are masculine and this rule is called natural gender. The word for sailor, nauta, is masculine. Later you may learn pirata, pirate or agricola, farmer. These are all masculine words because in ancient Rome, the people these words represent were all men.

A Word About Long Marks

Discussions about long marks, or macrons (macra—the ancient Greek adjective long), are lively and opinionated. Generally speaking, I was taught by my college professors not to worry about mastering the placement of long marks. We memorized them in the stems of words, but we didn't worry about learning how to predict where they would show up. By the time they mattered the most—when scanning and reading poetry out loud—we were fluent enough that we didn't need them placed in the text.

Our knowledge of pronunciation of Latin, including vowels and syllable quantity (whether a syllable should be pronounced long or short), comes from analysis of poetry, which was written in a particular meter. Linguists and Latinists were able to study the syllables and, because they knew the meter (rhythm) the poetry was written in, they learned the rules for short and long syllables. This is an oversimplification and even in poetry, authors frequently fudged syllable lengths to squish words they wanted to use into the correct meter.

Keep in mind, however, that people who spoke Latin in ancient times did not speak it like they were reading a grammar textbook. They spoke slang like we do, they made grammatical errors, and the language evolved in everyday speech due to influences of majority use, like we experience in English. (For example, “irregardless” is now in the dictionary.)

It is not complicated to learn the marks (if you so desire) as part of the spelling. Long marks do not change in the case endings (observe the long marks in the 1st declension; they are always as such and never change) while they do change in stems frequently between the nominative and genitive singular forms. They do affect pronunciation, and pronunciation is very important, so observe them when you are reading Latin, but don't fret when you are writing English to Latin. The goal when composing in Latin is rapid, confident writing that is above all grammatically correct.

If you want to master long marks for verbs and other forms, pay attention to the long vowel rules that I introduce here. With a little observation and some practice, it will become comfortable to you to apply long marks where they belong and remove them where necessary.

Only vowels that are long by nature receive long marks. Long marks are not added to vowels that are long by position. Vowels that are long by position are pronounced with the short vowel sound but are held twice as long as a short vowel.
