Integrative theological education refers to systematic attempts to connect major learning experiences appropriate to the education and formation of ministers. It is seen as a solution to connect and transform ministry training. The main premise of this book is that the key to enhancing theological education is the intentional integration of knowing with being and doing, of theory with practice and of theology with life and ministry. In this way, all aspects of student learning are brought together holistically, highlighting an educational strategy that is concerned with connections in human experience, thereby supporting student learning. Making Connections offers the opportunity to consider integration as an appropriate pedagogical approach to create the correct balance in making education more meaningful and fulfilling for the African, revealing humanising education grounded in African philosophy and worldview.

Making Connections Heather Devere, 2024-10-27 This book is a historical review of literature and ideas that make the connections between friendship and politics. Using pertinent quotations from a wide variety of sources, the book is divided into three main parts. Firstly, it explores interpretations of the concept of friendship, tracing its use from the Ancient Greek and Roman philosophical works through to modern and postmodern perspectives touching on different cultural, religious and ethical connections. Secondly, the concept of the political is identified according to different aspects and ideological emphases, looking at influences in different time periods and demonstrating the importance of relational politics as viewed through feminism, identity, culture, globalism and the ethics of care. The third part draws together the political and friendship, highlighting the importance of relational politics and civic friendship as a topic relevant for academic consideration of politics.

Making Connections, 2006-01-01 In this book, comparisons are made between the practices of classrooms in a variety of different school systems around the world. The abiding challenge for classroom research is the realization of structure in diversity. The structure in this case takes the form of patterns of participation, regularities in the social practices of mathematics classrooms. The expansion of our field of view to include international rather than just local classrooms increases the diversity and heightens the challenge of the search for structure while increasing the significance of any structures once found. In particular, this book reports on the use of lesson events as an entry point for the analysis of lessons.

structure International research offers opportunities to study settings and characteristics untenable in the researcher's local situation Importantly international comparative studies can reveal possibilities for practice that would go unrecognized within the established norms of educational practice of one country or one culture Our capacity to conceive of alternatives to our current practice is constrained by deep rooted assumptions reflecting cultural and societal values that we lack the perspective to question The comparisons made possible by international research facilitate our identification and interrogation of these assumptions Such interrogation opens up possibilities for innovation that might not otherwise be identified expanding the repertoire of mathematics teachers internationally and providing the basis for theory development

Building Communities and Making Connections Susana Rivera-Mills, Juan Antonio Trujillo, 2010-02-19 Building Communities and Making Connections explores areas of academic and community engagement through various studies that include community service learning and the development and implementation of university programs that contain a community dimension Academic endeavors have long been seen as separate from the realities of local and regional communities This book closes the gap by looking at ways in which both academia and the communities it serves can collaborate to create authentic and applied learning environments

This highly readable text provides the theories, concepts, and applications in a pedagogically sound format based on a model of communication competence made up of three elements: motivation, knowledge, and skill. Covering a broad range of interpersonal communication themes, including strategic alternatives and solutions to communication challenges, and information about friendship, family, romantic, and workplace relationships, this Second Edition presents theories, concepts, and activities with engaging examples and an attention-getting design. Crossing Borders, Making Connections Allison Burkette, Tamara Warhol, 2021-01-18

This edited volume explores the scope of interdisciplinary linguistics and includes voices from scholars in different disciplines within the social sciences and humanities, as well as different sub-disciplines within linguistics. Chapters within this volume offer a range of perspectives on interdisciplinary studies, represent a connection between different disciplines, or demonstrate an application of interdisciplinarity within linguistics. The volume is divided into three sections: perspectives, connections, and applications.

Perspectives The goal of this section is to address more generally the definitions of and value of multi-trans and interdisciplinary work. In what areas and for what purposes is there a need for work that crosses discipline boundaries? What are the challenges of undertaking such work? What opportunities are available?

Connections This section features paired chapters written by scholars in different disciplines that discuss the same concept, idea, or issue. For example, a discussion of how assemblage works in archaeology is paired with a discussion of how assemblage can be used to talk about style in linguistics.

Applications This section can be framed as sample answers to the question: What does interdisciplinarity look like? Making Connections Charles T. Meadow, 2002-02-11

Meadow takes us on a Cook's tour of communication technologies across time—the alphabet and moveable type, printing, cave drawings, and carrier pigeons, telephones, television, and of course, the Internet. In each case, Meadow shows how these and other devices are connected to each other, even as they serve to make connections between people. Part One discusses the basics of communications, while Part Two delves into telecommunications before the days of steam and electricity. Part Three offers insight into steam, electricity, and internal combustion energy, and how they revolutionized society. Communication is the key to a productive world. For those dazzled by the pace of change in the technology, or McLuhan's unorthodox but brilliant insights, Meadow's casual style and pace provide the perfect antidote. Making Meaning by Making Connections Kathy L. Schuh, 2016-10-20

This book documents those first links that students make between content they learn in their classrooms and their prior experiences. Through six late elementary school case studies, these knowledge construction links are brought to life. The links of the students are often rich in describing who these individuals are where they are in their learning process and what is meaningful to them Many times these links point to what has been learned both in and out of school and the contexts when and where that learning took place The mind as rhizome metaphor was used to guide the development and interpretation of the studies while the lens of Peircian semiotics provides an interpretation for these initial links The resulting grounded theory is presented through a rich and extensive presentation of excerpts from classroom observations student interviews and a student writing activity and describes the varying types of student links how the links were prompted the relationships between what the students were learning and what they already knew and specific types of in school links The narrative includes how these links were supported or inhibited in the classroom drawing on the roles of the teachers in the classrooms and what constituted authority sources of information in those classrooms Before exploring the students linking as a process of ongoing semiosis and how this process is part of a dynamic system a study of the relationship between student knowledge links and achievement is shared This rich narrative will be of interest to scholars and practitioners alike and includes an extensive appendix documenting the research methods
