Q2. Which one of the following is a provision of Human Rights
a) The ECHR guarantees the Article 2 of the ECHR is fundamental as it protects the right to life. It imposes an obligation on the state to ensure that individuals are not arbitrarily deprived of their lives. In this scenario, the accidental killing of John Doe by Officer Smith raises serious concerns about whether the state is fulfil its duty to protect life. The state must demonstrate that the use of lethal force was absolutely necessary and proportionate to the threat posed. Given that John Doe was unarmed and posed no immediate threat, it is likely that the use of force was excessive and unjustified, constituting a violation of Article 2.

Article 3 prohibits torture and inhuman or degrading treatment. While this article primarily addresses the treatment of individuals in custody, it also extends to the actions of law enforcement officers during operations. The excessive use of force resulting in John Doe's death could be considered inhuman and degrading treatment, particularly if it is found that the police operation was conducted recklessly or without proper regard for the safety of citizens.

Article 13 guarantees the right to an effective remedy for violations of the ECHR. John Doe's family has the right to seek justice and compensation for the loss of their loved one. This includes the right to a thorough and impartial investigation into the circumstances of the shooting, as well as the possibility of holding those responsible accountable. The family may pursue legal action against the state for failing to protect John Doe's right to life and for the subsequent treatment he suffered.
