The Bostkall model A.P.C. Audio Amplifier is designed to offer the maximum in performance, flexibility, and utility at the lowest possible cost. To this end, several features have been incorporated which are unusual in instruments in this price range.

Protonics has been made for four separate inputs. Any two of these may be selected by means of the input selection switch. For magnetic phase coding inputs, two channel separate channel controllers have been provided. Sufficient amplification is available to drive the amplifier with any of the low-level phase signals or microprocessors are available. A range of output impedances make it possible to match the amplifier to any of the popular tape fidelity or public address system systems commonly used.

Special features have been provided to make the A-80 amplifier particularly attractive to the advanced radiologist and technologist. Space for an additional control control for maximum viewing of other input, provision for a third viewing aperture, and a highly flexible, easy-to-use, system are some of these features. Components for integrating these changes should be obtained readily. Full range "second-cut" type tone controls are included. Particular attention has been given to reducing hum and noise to a minimum. All control shafts are the break-off type so that the amplifier can be readily mounted in existing cabinets or used in the open. The entire amplifier is contained in a single chassis.

The output of a 15A6T dual triode is used as a negative phase-pulse generator. The output of this stage is fed through one of two triaxial amplifiers. The input of the other triode section of the 15A6T may be obtained to reflect the output of any one of the phase amplifiers, a low-level "flat" input for microphones, a medium-level input from a crystal or ceramic phase pickup, or a high-level "flat" input from a tape, tape recorder, or similar source. Two channels are connected between the helical sections of the first 15A6T dual triode: a second 15A6T amplifier and phase splitter (using the push-pull, third-power amplifiers). The power supply is a conventional transformer — full-wave rectifier (5Y4G) — RC filter system. Increased output volume is made, together with a tone-selecting system providing system. Three known circuits contribute considerably to the reduction of hum and noise. Different decoupling is supplied to the plate supply but to prevent any instability. Negative feedback is used around the second 15A6T and the output stage to further reduce noise, flatten the frequency response, and lower the internal impedance of the amplifier output.

Equipment. The two agitator circuits used in the A-B-C were selected as components in the 100% A-B phantom for the most variation in recording characteristics. Because of the wide range of these characteristics, it is suggested to select two agitators which will cover the widest range possible (positive-compression rows). The two circuits described will convert, within an order-of-magnitude of duration, to all the more popular types of motion technology. Space has been provided for the addition of a third circuit, should you wish to do so at a later date. Note that the addition of another agitator will necessarily decrease one of the other inputs, since the total input potentials are limited to five. The design and application of each agitator circuit is covered quite completely in articles listed in the appendix at the end of this manual.
