Logistics Support Plan, 1972 Technical Manual United States. War Department, 1942 Technical Manual United States Department of the Army, 1972 Manual for Planning and Operating Terminals Drake, Startzman, Sheahan, Barclay, inc., New York, 1950 On motion planning and control for truck and trailer systems Oskar Ljungqvist, 2019-01-17

During the last decades improved sensor and hardware technologies as well as new methods and algorithms have made self driving vehicles a realistic possibility in the near future Thanks to this technology enhancement many leading automotive and technology companies have turned their attention towards developing advanced driver assistance systems ADAS and self driving vehicles Autonomous vehicles are expected to have their first big impact in closed areas such as mines harbors and loading offloading sites In such areas the legal requirements are less restrictive and the surrounding environment is more controlled and predictable compared to urban areas Expected positive outcomes include increased productivity and safety reduced emissions and the possibility to relieve the human from performing complex or dangerous tasks Within these sites different truck and trailer systems are used to transport materials These systems are composed of several interconnected modules and are thus large and highly unstable while reversing This thesis addresses the problem of designing efficient motion planning and feedback control frameworks for such systems First a cascade controller for a reversing truck with a dolly steered trailer is presented The unstable modes of the system is stabilized around circular equilibrium configurations using a gain scheduled linear quadratic LQ controller together with a higher level pure pursuit controller to enable path following of piecewise linear reference paths The cascade controller is then used within a rapidly exploring random tree RRT framework and the complete motion planning and control framework is demonstrated on a small scale test vehicle Second a path following controller for a reversing truck with a dolly steered trailer is proposed for the case when the obtained motion plan is kinematically feasible The control errors of the system are modeled in terms of their deviation from the nominal path and a stabilizing LQ controller with feedforward action is designed based on the linearization of the control error model Stability of the closed loop system is proven by combining global optimization theory from linear differential inclusions and linear matrix inequality techniques Third a systematic framework is presented for analyzing stability of the closed loop system consisting of a controlled vehicle and a feedback controller executing a motion plan computed by a lattice planner When this motion planner is considered it is shown that the closed loop system can be modeled as a nonlinear hybrid system Based on this a novel method is presented for analyzing the behavior of the tracking error how to design the feedback controller and how to potentially impose constraints on the motion planner in order to guarantee that the tracking error is bounded and decays towards zero Fourth a complete motion planning and control solution for a truck with a dolly steered trailer is presented A lattice based motion planner is proposed where a novel parametrization of the vehicle s state space is proposed to improve online planning time A time symmetry result is established that enhance the numerical stability of the numerical optimal control solver used for generating the motion primitives Moreover a nonlinear observer for state estimation is developed which only utilizes information from sensors that are mounted on the truck making the system independent of additional trailer sensors The proposed framework is implemented on a full scale truck with a dolly steered trailer and results from a series of field experiments are presented
