

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

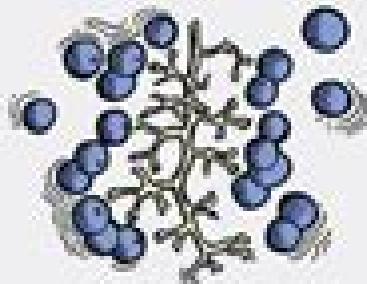

The only range of wine-making equipment in the world that's designed for the home

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) starts in late August and it's done by hand in the vineyard. Grapes are picked and then grapes are taken to the cellar for processing.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and then de-stemmed. Some wineries ferment whole clusters to add flavour. The result is a mixture of whole grapes and juice. Most wineries use a crusher to break the grapes into juice and skins.

Clarification

Clarification or 'fining' is the process of removing any unwanted particles from the wine. This is done by adding a fining agent to the wine. Some wineries use egg whites to clarify the wine.

Press

After the fermentation process, the wine is pressed. The juice is then separated from the skins and seeds. The juice is then bottled.

Fermentation

Grapes are left to ferment in the barrel for several days. The juice is then separated from the skins and seeds. The juice is then bottled.

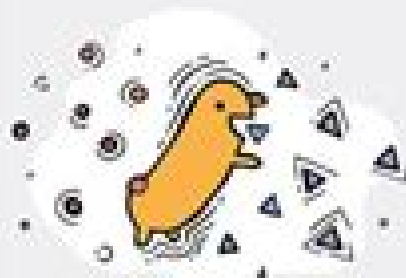

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the wine to start the fermentation process. The yeast is added to the wine and the wine is left to ferment for several days. The juice is then separated from the skins and seeds. The juice is then bottled.

Bottling

Bottling is the final stage of the wine-making process. The wine is bottled and the bottles are sealed. The wine is then left to age for several months.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is the process of converting malic acid into lactic acid. This process is done by adding a malolactic bacteria to the wine. The wine is then left to ferment for several days.

Aging

The wine is left to age in the barrels for several months. The wine is then bottled and the bottles are sealed. The wine is then left to age for several months.

Blending

The wine is blended with other wines to create a final blend. The wine is then bottled and the bottles are sealed. The wine is then left to age for several months.

Bottle aging

The wine is left to age in the bottles for several months. The wine is then bottled and the bottles are sealed. The wine is then left to age for several months.
