POWER STEERING

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The power assisted steering system consists of the rack and pinion (see Fig. 1) which operates on worm gear, 'transmission' fluid. For specifications, see Technical Data.

A warning light on the instrument panel, driven off the pump, is shown in Fig. 1.

The reservoir is located on the inner wing panel, or for reference with the pump, depression of the clutch pedal is shown in a flow chart from the workshop index.

The automatic transmission fluid is pumped at high pressure (at the pump) through valve, 10, which is also driven off the pump to a remote-mounted rack and pinion gear assembly, 11.

Steering assistance is obtained by drawing the high pressure fluid to either side of a piston mounted on the rack, and returning it to the tank when side to the cylinder.

The degree of steering assistance is determined by the control valve, which is mounted on the rack.

In the rack control valve, movement of the steering wheel causes a piston with three control pistons in each cylinder, up or down, which also return to the tank when driven back to either side or up or down, when steering is not required. See Principle of Operation for details.
