

PROTEIN SYNTHESIS

TRANSLATION

1. Translation is the process of synthesizing a protein from an mRNA template. The mRNA template is read in groups of three bases, called codons. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid.

2. During translation, the ribosome moves along the mRNA template, reading the codons and adding the corresponding amino acids to the growing polypeptide chain.

3. The process of translation continues until the ribosome reaches a stop codon, which signals the end of the protein.

THE GENETIC CODE

"One codon at a time"

1. Biological systems use sequences of three nucleotides to specify the amino acids that are used to build proteins. These sequences are called codons.

2. Each codon codes for a specific amino acid. The genetic code is a "dictionary" of all the combinations of three nucleotides that code for the 20 amino acids.

3. The genetic code is universal, meaning that it is the same in all living organisms. This is because all living organisms use the same genetic code to build proteins.

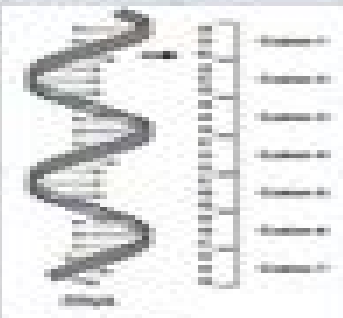

4. The genetic code is a "dictionary" of all the combinations of three nucleotides that code for the 20 amino acids.

"One gene - one protein"

1. Each gene contains the instructions for building a specific protein. The instructions are written in the form of a sequence of nucleotides.

2. The sequence of nucleotides in a gene determines the sequence of amino acids in the protein that it codes for.

3. The sequence of amino acids in a protein determines its function.

4. The sequence of amino acids in a protein determines its function.
